RALPH MCGILL

What Is A Farmer?

At the lecture in the Illinois room of the LaSalle Hotel, Chicago, a stocky gentleman in a well-tailored brown suit was speaking.

He used a number of chemical formulas. He spoke knowledgeably of starches, proteins, genes and mutations. His English was impeccable. Before him sat some 600 or more men, each intent on what was being said.

The neatly clad, learned speaker is a farmer. So are those who were listening so intently. They are all specialists. Their money crop is hybrid seed corn.

We badly need a new image of the farmer and also one of his farm. Certainly the old one is obsolete. When we speak of a farmer today we do not at all mean the one of 20 years or more ago. The man bent with the hoe, the stooped man plodding wearily after a mule pulling a plow—that is not today's farmer. The poorly educated man, putting his mule or horse in the barn at dusk and going to a house lacking modern conveniences, is something out of the past. Here and there, in small rural pockets of life, some semblance of the old days and ways may be found. But they are doomed to go swiftly and soon.

Few Survivors

The horny-handed man in the faded jeans, patched work shirt and heavy, worn plow shoes whose lack and discontents have been the meat on which political demagogues fed, has been gone a long time save for the few survivors who are the exception that proves the rule.

The hot-eyed angry men whose bitter lot of debt, mortgage, high interest rates and rapacious money-lenders sparked the explosive Populist revolution in the last quarter of the 19th Century are no more.

Yet, in all the state legislatures, and even in the Congress, it is this old image of the farmer and of agriculture which is evoked in debates and laws.

This, indeed, is one thing that is wrong with farm legislation. It is this old image which confuses public opinion, delays the necessary planning and action.

The farm problem today is one of too much—not too little.

The small family farm is going, it is being absorbed into larger units. This process is slowest in the Southeast. But even there the number declines annually at a faster pace. There is something inherently sad about it. It makes one so happy. When the family farm finally disappears into the maw of bigness in demand, production and costs, something uniquely and irreplaceably American will have passed. But that time is coming.

New Discoveries

Science is not coming to the farm. It is already there. New discoveries in weed controls, fertilizers, in the chemistry and cell structure of soils, and in the genes of plants and the mystery of growth are emerging from research laboratories each year. The farmers of today are those who know of these things and apply that which is proved of dollar value.

New uses for crops emerge also from laboratories.

Take, for example, high amylose corn. In the years ahead it may well consume an estimated 40 to 100 million bushels of corn annually. The effect of this on surpluses, and on demand, is at once obvious. Here, indeed, is drama—a laboratory experiment in hybrid corn which creates a need for perhaps 100 million bushels by the starch industry.

Ordinary corn contains only about 27 per cent amylose starch. This type has long unbranched molecules which are suited to making films and fibers. In 1952 a hybrid mutation was discovered which, it is believed, soon will be available for widespread use. It will produce about 60 per cent amylose starch.

Sitting there listening to the talks at the hybrid-corn convention, I kept thinking of the old-time farmer of my boyhood.

He didn't know about amylose, genes or molecules. He just plowed, hoed, reaped, and prayed for rain.

Moon Shot Burns Out Over Africa

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Army's lunar probe, its instruments working to the last, crashed into the earth's atmosphere and burned up over Africa Sunday after a flight that carried it a third of the way to the moon.

Army scientists immediately hailed the scientific results of the robot's 66,654-mile flight into space while conceding some "engineering disappointment" that it did not attain the velocity needed to reach the moon and pass into an orbit around the sun.

Dr. William H. Pickering, director of the Army's Jet Propulsion Laboratory, Pasadena, Calif., said the probe yielded data which for the first time produced information on the intensity of some of the deadly radiation belt surrounding the earth.

FIRST TRY

Dr. Werner von Braun, of the Army Ballistic Missile Agency, said the flight was deemed 90 per cent successful because "on the first try, this never-tested rocket" was launched at a pre-determined time with no count-down troubles.

The 13-pound robot, dubbed Pioneer III, met a fiery death in the air over French Equatorial Africa. In an exceptional performance, information from its instruments was received until a bare 20 minutes before the end.

The device was falling at a speed of 23,241 miles an hour when it struck the atmosphere at 2:51 p.m., e.s.t. and presumably flared like a meteor, although there were no immediate reports that it had been observed by any eye-witnesses.

Both Pickering and von Braun said their scientists were delighted that the robot's instruments functioned on the return trip through the radiation belt as well as on the rocket's ascent.

Larrazabal Falls Behind in Venezuela Race

CARACAS, Venezuela (UPI). Former provisional President Romulo Betancourt of the Democratic Action Party opened up a lead Sunday night in the three-way race for president in Venezuela's first free elections after 10 years of dictatorship.

Early returns showed strong support from the provinces en route Betancourt to pull ahead of Rear Adm. Wolfgang Larrazabal, former head of the government junta, and Rafael Caldera, a prominent Roman Catholic leader running on the Christian Socialist Party ticket.

dropping life jackets, a raft, and other emergency equipment. (It would be some time later before official sources deduced that these were members of the Indianapolis crew.)

Circling for more altitude, Gwinn's astounded crew now counted 75 heads in the water, and Chief Radioman Hartman keyed out a second message to Peleliu. And a few minutes later another message—150 men now.

But there was no such excitement in Peleliu. Gwinn's first

Berlin Vote Vetoes Red City Plans

Soviet Washout In Parliament

By SEYMOUR TOPPING

BERLIN (AP) — West Berlin voters early Monday had solidly rejected the Soviet Union's bid to make West Berlin a neutral city by swamping the Communists in the election of a new City Parliament.

Defying Communist threats to the isolated city, West Berliners turned out in record numbers to bar the Reds completely from the 133-seat Parliament.

The balloting doomed Communist hopes for popular endorsement of Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev's proposal to oust Allied troops from West Berlin and convert the city into an unarmed neutral island.

HAILS ANTI-RED VOTE

Khrushchev himself has conceded his plan had little chance "unless the people want it themselves."

Willy Brandt, the city's fighting Socialist lord mayor, hailed the smashing non-Communist vote.

"Berlin remains free," he declared. "The people have said decisively the will never bow to the yoke of communism."

Brandt led his party to an absolute majority victory over the Christian Democrats of Chancellor Konrad Adenauer.

The final official returns from the 1,860 voting districts gave this breakdown of the popular vote:

OFFICIAL RETURNS

Socialists 849,833 (52.1 per cent)
Christian Democrats 608,927 (37.3)

Free Democrats 61,054 (3.8)

German party 53,899 (3.3)

Free Peoples party 10,675 (0.7)

Communists 31,520 (1.9)

The Communists would have had to win 5 per cent of the vote to seat a single candidate. They have never won a parliamentary post in West Berlin.

Election headquarters said a first official count showed the Socialists would get 78 of the Parliament seats and the Christian Democrats the other 55. Spokesmen said a subsequent confirming count will be made.

TREND CONTINUED

The election continued a trend toward a two-party system already demonstrated in West Germany. Both big parties gained at the expense of the Free Democrats.

The Communists were trampled in the vote surge despite the biggest election campaign they have staged and the backing of the Russians and East German propaganda machines. The Reds got 2.7 per cent of the West Berlin vote in 1954 when they put on a modest election drive.

Weather Slated To Turn a Bit Warmer 2 Days

Partly cloudy and slightly warmer is forecast for Monday and Tuesday, with a chance of showers Tuesday, according to the Weather Bureau.

Monday's expected extremes are 26 and 54 degrees, and Tuesday's are 34 and 58 degrees. Sunday's extremes were 27 and 51 degrees.

message — "Sighted 30 men in water, position 11-30N, 133-30E." came through badly garbled. When the Communications Center got through, it read something like "Am circling life raft," a common report in those days.

However, the second and third messages came through better, and Communications quickly rang up Operations at the nearby headquarters of Rear Adm. Elliott Buckmaster, commander, Western Carolines Sub-area. The operations officer, Com. Marshall A. Anderson, granted permission

Keep Schools Open By State-Federal Laws, Democrat Council Asks

HARMONY PREVAILS AT BREAKFAST OF ADVISORY COUNCIL
Adlai Stevenson (Right) Reaches to Shake Hand of Harry Truman, as Paul Butler Smiles

Democrats' Bell Hits New Policy

John Sammons Bell, state Democratic Party chairman, fired both barrels at the Democratic Advisory Council's "State of the Union message" Sunday night.

"It is a disgraceful and dangerous situation when the so-called spokesmen for the party of Jefferson-Jackson, the party born and bred on the principle of states-rights should reject the individual liberty, and in effect denounce the sovereignty of the several states," he said.

COUNCIL ACTS

The council proposed a curb on Senate filibusters by a majority of the Senate's total membership and called for effective federal and state legislative action to reopen closed schools in the South.

Bell said he was grateful "to Providence" that the Democratic Advisory Council has very little if anything to do with Congress.

He said that "such great Americans as Georgia's Dick Russell and others like him have refused to accept membership in the spurious group."

PERILS CONGRESS

"If the so-called Democratic Advisory Council and their Republican brothers under the skin like Jacob Javits (New York Republican) were to have their way and eliminate Rule 22 then the last and only remaining legislative body in the world where free debate can prevail would be destroyed," he added.

The state party chairman said the latest declaration by the council demonstrates one thing conclusively:

"The American people everywhere and in every state must assert themselves vigorously for the Constitution of the United States or it will shortly amount to no more than a mere scrap of paper."

Cuba Extends Suspension Of Guarantees

HAVANA, Cuba (AP)—The Cabinet Saturday night approved a decree extending suspension of constitutional guarantees in Cuba for another 45 days. Guarantees were to have been re-established Sunday.

The Cabinet also agreed that the President should ask Congress to declare a state of national emergency because of the Fidel Castro rebellion.

Congress will meet Tuesday to consider the suspension of guarantees and Wednesday to consider declaration of a national emergency.

State College Segregation Case Begins

The trial of a suit aimed at knocking out segregation at Georgia State College of Business Administration is scheduled for 10 a.m. Monday in U.S. District Court here.

In the complaint, three Negroes—Barbara Hunt, Iris Mae Welch and Myra Elliott Dismore—charge they applied for admission to the school in June, 1956, and were rejected because of "unconstitutional" entrance requirements.

The suit was brought against members of the Board of Regents of the University System of Georgia. The defendants will be represented by State Atty. Gen. Eugene Cook and associates Bob Hall, Freeman Leveritt and B. D. Murphy.

Plaintiff attorneys are E. E. Moore Jr., D. L. Hollowell, both of Atlanta, and Mrs. Constance B. Motley of the staff of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People in New York.

U.S. District Judge Boyd Sloan will hear the case.

Bright Jury Resuming Its Study

A jury will resume deliberation at 9:30 a.m. Monday morning in the trial of George Bright, charged with dynamiting The Temple. The case went to the Fulton Superior Court jury about 11 o'clock Saturday night. When the jurors failed to reach a verdict before midnight, Judge Durwood Pye ordered them taken to a hotel.

Georgia law prohibits jury deliberations or returning a verdict on Sunday.

ALL ARTICLES

Jury members passed the time playing ping pong and checkers in a private recreation room at the hotel. They were permitted to watch television and listen to radios, but attending court deputies switched off the sets when news programs came on. They were provided newspapers with all articles relating to the trial clipped out.

The judge authorized a bus ride for the group but the jurors apparently were content to remain in their hotel wing until time to return to court.

A grand jury indicted Bright and four other Atlanta area men on charges of bombing the Temple Oct. 12. The others, who are expected to be brought to trial later, are Wallace H. Allen, Kenneth Chester Griffin and Robert and Richard Bowling.

SENTENCE CHOICES

In charging the jury, Pye said the jurors could return a verdict of guilty, in which case the sen-

Group's Act Draws New Dixie Fire

By W. H. LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON — The Democratic Advisory Council called Sunday night for effective federal and state legislative action to reopen closed schools and prevent other schools from closing in the struggle over racial integration.

The group stirred new Southern protests by this recommendation and also by proposing a curb on Senate filibusters by a majority of the Senate's total membership. Two Southerners—Mrs. B. B. Everett of North Carolina and Camille Gravel Jr. of Louisiana—dissented from the otherwise unanimous advisory council.

POLICY STATEMENT

The program amounted to a Democratic "State of the Union message" on foreign and domestic policies for consideration by the new Democratic-controlled Congress. It was made public about a month in advance of President Eisenhower's presentation of his own program.

The council's recommendations went well beyond the program so far put forward by the dominant Southern leadership of the Democratic Congress, represented by Speaker Rayburn and Senate Majority Leader Johnson, both of Texas.

OPPOSED

Rayburn and Johnson opposed creation of the council two years ago and refused to serve as members. They are not likely to take kindly to the new program put forward in the name of the party as a whole, especially as dentally, have highways so good as to make Georgia blush.

The road to a dollar's-worth-for-dollar-spent highway system is paved with three ingredients:

1. Long-range planning to determine scientifically where the need is most urgent.

2. A definite formula for fund-distribution, so that counties and cities will know how much state aid to expect.

3. Professional direction of the highway department, with political pressure removed as far as possible from day-to-day operations.

Georgia, let it be said from the beginning, lacks all three.

South Carolina in the early thirties achieved the third objective, and the other two goals have followed. It is no surprise that South Carolina is known throughout the nation for its good roads.

But it is North Carolina which today has embraced the three basic precepts to the fullest extent.

Rogers Warns Bias Will Peril Economy

Labels Defiance as Creator Of Fanatical Bombing Acts

By IRVING SPIEGEL

(Copyright 1958 by The New York Times Co.)

NEW YORK — U.S. Atty. Gen. Rogers Sunday warned those communities suffering from "tensions from racial prejudice"—stemming from "the desegregation issue"—that they must reckon with "economic implications."

The cabinet officer indicated that private enterprise, "in making new investments, will necessarily take into account the climate of local opinion and the public facilities that will be available to personnel."

At the same time Rogers said the federal government, in determining the location of "new or expanded facilities, will have to give consideration to the availability of public schools and other public conveniences as a matter of fairness and justice to its personnel who will be on duty there."

PROVIDED HIGHLIGHT

His address provided the highlight of the America's Democratic legacy awards luncheon of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith which ended its four-day 45th annual meeting at the Savoy Hilton Hotel here.

Henry Edward Schultz, national chairman of the agency, presented the agency's 1958 awards—silver medallions—to the New York Times, Look Magazine and the Columbia Broadcasting System for their "contributions to the enrichment of America's democratic heritage." Dr. Frank Stanton, president of CBS; Gardner Cowles, president of Look Magazine, and Orvil Dryfoos, president of the New York Times, accepted the awards.

Speaking on the theme "Public Opinion and Civil Rights," Rogers declared that equality under law, which is a national concept, "could never be a violation of the rights of any state." The legal situation of school desegregation, he added, "has been settled and no serious-minded person can doubt the permanence of the decision by the Supreme Court."

STRONG TERMS

Using strong terms, Rogers said that a "grave consequence of attitudes of defiance is that they create an atmosphere in which extremists and fanatics are encouraged to take the law in their own hands."

Bombings in schools and houses of worship, he declared, appeared to be a retaliation against people of "good will" who had not opposed integration. He noted that 13 public schools in four communities had been closed to avoid compliance with court decrees. The education of about 16,400 children, he said, had been interrupted because of this occurrence.

"The responsibility for this wanton destruction," he declared, "rests, in my opinion, on the doorsteps of those who stir up race prejudice and advocate defiance of law."

LEGISLATIVE PROPOSALS

Rogers emphasized that the Justice department, through the Federal Bureau of Investigation, was attempting to apprehend all those guilty of the bombings. He said also that the Justice department was "giving careful thought and study to a number of legislative proposals" to strengthen the supreme court's decision.

Doomed Author, 8, Gets Top Wish...Publication

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—Little Mike Rollins is only 8 years old but already he's a writer, and not a bad one, and in his bright, young eagerness he dreams of the glorious day he'll see his first story published.

Well, dreams can come true, and if it's not quite the way he expected it, maybe this will bring him the wonder he's searching for. It's not too much to do for a little boy who's going to die.

Mike doesn't know death is near. He knows he has a disease called lymphosarcoma, but nobody has told him it means acute leukemia because Mike knows Red Skelton's son died of leukemia.

ILL SINCE AUGUST

Mike has been in the hospital four times since he became ill last August. He's there now and although he'd like to write, he's not quite up to it.

Mike is a bright, good-looking youngster, alert, articulate—and modest.

"I'm not exactly a writer," he says. "I write stories. I want people to think they could happen—but heck, when somebody else would read them, they'd laugh at them."

"It's just that I get these thoughts in my head and I just like to put them in stories."

Mike says it's easy if you know what to write, but he adds sadly:

A GOOD FEELING

"Sometimes I don't know quite what I'm writing about."

And then he remarks ruefully: "Sometimes I'm writing a story with a good beginning, but I can't find any way to end it."

But that's only sometimes. Most of the time he does have an ending, and yet the real pleasure is still missing. They're unpublished, and as Mike says, and other writers agree: "To have other people know you wrote it and know other people are reading it—it's a pretty good feeling."

Well, Mike may never see this, but he's getting one of his stories published right now:

Here It Is, Mike

"Merry Christmas"

By MICHAEL PATRICK ROLLINS

The day was cold, it was starting to snow. Through the streets of a small village walked a poor woodcutter with a small fir tree on his back.

When he came to a house on a corner, he knocked and was let in.

"Oh, boy," said tiny voices when he walked in the door, "our Christmas tree."

It was the woodcutter's children, excited and happy as most children are around Christmas.

But his wife noticed a sad look on the woodcutter's face.

"What is the trouble," she asked.

"We have no money for presents this year," said the woodcutter.

"But we know the real meaning of Christmas," said his wife.

"I know," said the woodcutter, "but the little ones will be disappointed."

"Don't worry," said his wife, "Christmas is still a while away. Maybe you can find a way to make some money."

That night the woodcutter sat to think. Then he got an idea. He went to bed and the next morning he took his ax and went to the woods. After a while he came back with another fir tree.

After awhile he came back again with another one and stood it up against the house and went back to the woods. After he had about four trees he took them downtown. That night the woodcutter came home without the trees, but with a smile. The woodcutter continued this for a couple of days.

On Christmas morning, the woodcutter's children found their presents under the Christmas tree.

"How did you do it?" asked the woodcutter's wife.

"It was easy," said the woodcutter, "I sold Christmas trees."

The End.

Penalty for Withholding Vote Files Not Revealed

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP)—The Civil Rights Commission declined Sunday night to say what action it might take against voter registration officials who refuse to produce their records at Monday's hearing.

The six-member commission starts a public inquiry on Negro voting complaints in six Alabama counties Monday morning, the first hearing since the commission was created by Congress more than a year ago.

Of the six counties where voter registration files have been subpoenaed, two have been impounded by an Alabama judge and records in three other counties have been turned over to grand juries in state courts for what were described as independent investigations.

Only in Macon County have the files escaped being turned over to local courts. But the chairman of the board of registrars there has said he will defy the subpoena and Alabama Atty. Gen.

John Patterson has promised to resist any attempt to produce the records at Monday's hearing.

Dean Robert G. Storey of the Southern Methodist University Law School, vice chairman of the commission, told reporters at a news conference Saturday night that the question of what to do if witnesses refuse to produce the records will be answered at that time.

Fulton Jury Issues Call to Leadership

The Fulton County Grand Jury, acting in the best tradition of the great and integral part of our system of government by law, has issued a special presentment calling on all of us and each of us to provide leadership in the present problem of saving public education.

Members of the jury made these points:

1. Let elected officials, in view of recent judicial decisions, examine their positions and if found untenable seek to guide our citizens to find workable solutions.

2. They requested that the Chamber of Commerce of Atlanta, representing business, take a position of leadership and explain to the people the economic disaster which would result to the city and state if public education is lost. To fill the vacuum of leadership, its membership owes the city a duty to provide a committee which will serve as a bridge of communication between the races. This committee should be permanent.

3. The jury called attention of both races to the fact that imposition of decisions from outside will not work. The solution must be local. Therefore, they called upon elected officials to permit committees to work out local solutions. The white people, the jury feels, considers outside pressure to be great. The Negro believes he has no choice. This makes the need for committees at work more imperative.

4. The people, and elected officials especially, have a duty to refrain from inflammatory statements, name-calling and profane accusations. No thoughtful citizen can dissent from any of these points. The jury has acted with considerable candor and intellectual honesty.

Leaders of the Chamber of Commerce must know that forthright action is called for in a time of crisis and that inaction poses the greater danger to the city's economic and civic progress. Name-calling, defiance and inflammatory statements by persons in positions of authority and leadership solve nothing.

The rural counties, which receive 80 per cent or more of their school funds from the state, must also begin to think of the economic consequences of closed schools.

The jury has done a very real public service. We all must face up to realities.

Road Building Reforms Deserve Special Priority

While the financial picture for the state in the next four years still is a bit fuzzy, it appears obvious there will be considerable difficulty in meeting minimum requirements for existing programs unless fiscal controls are tightened and every possible economy put to use.

From all indications this especially will be true of the State Highway Department, which will be spending more money progressively as the federal-aid program gets under way. If Georgia is to find matching funds for this federal aid, the department will have to end some of the political road building of the immediate past.

There can be little doubt that something has been awry in our system of road construction and maintenance. The condition of many of our main paved routes is indication enough of that. Neglect of maintenance has resulted in many roads having to be rebuilt in their entirety. In other instances the construction was slipshod in the beginning and deteriorated in a matter of months.

Constitution reporter Bruce Galpin has made a rather thorough investigation of how neighboring states are building roads. The system being used in North and South Carolina is far superior to ours as far as making maximum use of available funds is concerned. These states have made a conscious effort to take politics out of their road program and to substitute definite formulae.

Success of their efforts can be seen on these states' highways today. It probably is impossible to remove politics entirely from road building. But it is possible to minimize it and it is possible to insure taxpayers their money's worth for their road dollars. In Georgia little effort has been made to do either.

Please Spare That Tree In Landscaping Work

One of the pleasures in strolling along the streets of Atlanta is in noting the well-kept greenery that surrounds so many of the industries located here.

It is a far cry from the time when factories were built on scorched earth from which every tree and every blade of grass had been obliterated.

Alert industry has learned the public looks with favor upon the firm that thinks well enough of itself to be concerned about the appearance of its immediate environment.

Trees are as much a part of our heritage as is the land we walk upon and the air we breathe. Atlanta is blessed many times over in having an abundance of them.

In Dallas, Tex., the Great Southwest Development Corp. is landscaping land for a number of companies. Rather than destroying trees, 10,000 trees are being planted upon 5,300 acres. One shade tree and one flowering tree will be planted for every 45 feet of street frontage.

This is a policy other development corporations could take under advisement, for there's no substitute for peaceful, serene surroundings while at work. A living tree is a joy to behold and a constant reminder to man of his Creator.

Maybe that's why few homes are without one, come Christmas time.

All Georgians Revere Joel Chandler Harris

Georgians who cherish the past and who would commemorate those who have given us a rich heritage in literature concentrate their attention this week on a gabled frame house, the Wren's Nest, 1050 Gordon St., in Atlanta.

That's where Uncle Remus was born. The number wasn't 1050 then, it was 312 and 312 Gordon St. wasn't even in Atlanta. West End was country and the house was on Snap Bean Farm. It was the home of Joel Chandler Harris, the man who created Uncle Remus. Joel Chandler Harris was born Dec. 9, 1848 at Eatonton in Putnam County. He came to Atlanta with the family when he was 27 and went to work for The Atlanta Constitution.

One day Clark Howell Sr., the publisher, and Henry Grady, the editor, asked Joel C. Harris to fill in for a columnist who was temporarily incapacitated. That columnist had written politics in Negro dialect.

Young Harris obliged, in dialect, not politics.

So that's how came into being a fictional character who has become real in many a mind.

The character and the man who created him became world famous and the names and works immortal.

The Uncle Remus Memorial Assn. was formed in 1913. The name has been changed to the Joel Chandler Harris Memorial Assn., as it should have been.

The association owns the Wren's Nest and maintains it as a memorial museum. More than 12,000 visitors see it yearly.

Wednesday the memorial association will observe Joel Chandler Harris' 110th birthday at a luncheon with the author's children and grandchildren among the honored guests.

Georgians revere Joel Chandler Harris and note his birthday in respectful memory. They should be grateful to the Joel Chandler Harris Assn. for what it has done and is doing to preserve the Wren's Nest as a memorial.

More Georgians should go see it.

Project To Conserve Okefenokee Progresses

Another stride toward preservation of the Okefenokee Swamp in all its grandeur is marked with the letting of a contract for construction of a 186-mile road surrounding it.

Part of a $728,000 fire protection and conservation project sponsored in Congress by Rep. Iris Blitch, the road will serve as a fire-break and as an access road for heavy equipment in fighting fires.

Another important phase of the undertaking, construction of water-retaining structures, already has begun.

The picturesque work of nature is one of Georgia's most valuable tourist attractions. Drought and flames in recent years have taken their toll, though, and the current project is vital to the future of the swamp.

Georgians as well as the thousands of out-of-state visitors who admire the Okefenokee welcome all progress made toward protecting and enriching this scenic wonderland.

The trouble with Federal Judge Philip Sullivan of Chicago, in the view of a 27-year-old bus driver named Garcia, is no sense of humor. We could use more judges who are as hard to amuse. "For kicks," Garcia had telephoned an air line office with a fake warning about a bomb in a plane. For a good laugh over all the right and trouble and expense he caused, he now has plenty of time—one year in jail.

Readers Continue To Discuss Pros, Cons Of Debate on Future of Georgia Schools

Washington, D.C.—I am not in favor of your moderation idea at all if it can in any honorable way be circumvented.

But neither am I in favor of being further hoodwinked by our great political leaders who have promised us for 30 years in Georgia that if they were elected to office they would never let it happen to us.

Well, the time has come for them to do what they bleated so loudly that they would do, and that was, up until now, "I'll never let it happen to you good folks here in Georgia."

Now in every headline those same people are begging the people to stand pat and not surrender. Who are they talking to, who are they trying to convince, the voters or themselves? I don't think the average Georgian is even thinking of surrendering. Most of us are going to stand pat and wait for those politicians to do what they have said many times they would do if we voted for them and that is, "never let it happen here in Georgia."

Come on, Mr. Politician, deliver on your promises or get off the throne. If you don't deliver then lots of us "dumb clucks" will make your descent from the throne a little easier by offering a helping hand at the polls.

DECATUR RESIDENT.

Atlanta—I wish to remain objective in my analysis so no names will be mentioned.

When a prominent politician all in the same week advocates closing of the public schools, a crash program to "catch up" with Russia in the field of nuclear-powered aircraft (an effort possible only with the most highly educated engineers and technicians) and accuses the administration of shortsightedness, then it would seem he needs more than his own eyes examined.

The question of whether he is sufficiently rational to continue the responsibilities of his office should be raised.

JOHN N. MCCLURE JR., M.D.

Atlanta—I would like to make a suggestion to bring about peace in the present school situation: To my mind the mixing of the sexes has proved far worse than integration on a nonmixed sex basis could ever be.

LYRIC.

Carrollton—I read your editorial Nov. 18, 1958, entitled, "Closing of Schools Is Worst Solution." In supporting Mayor Hartsfield's stand, part of your editorial reads as follows: "Mayor Hartsfield's suggestion that the people concerned be allowed the privilege of a referendum on whether or not to close the schools at least has the merit of the democratic process."

This "democratic process" which you call to our attention has already asserted itself strongly each time it has been given a chance to do so on the matter of integrating our public schools.

May I call a few to your attention? In the Democratic Primary in the state of Arkansas Gov. Faubus won re-election by the largest margin of victory ever recorded in that state. He carried all 75 counties and won 70 per cent of the votes cast. He had spoken plainly on how he felt on the forced integration issue and the people of Arkansas spoke plainly when they backed him up. The people of Little Rock emphasized this conviction when they voted 3 to 1 not to open their schools on an integrated basis. The defeat of Rep. Brooks Hays in a write-in vote gave us still another indication of the feeling of the people.

Where is our relief? If we cannot through the democratic processes of elections and passage of laws in our Legislatures express ourselves and know that these expressions will be given consideration, then where do we stand?

Atlanta—This is a letter of thanksgiving:

For a mayor who puts the welfare of his city above his personal career.

For 312 ministers who have spoken for the consciences of us all.

For fellow citizens whose letters to the paper are proof that the people are taking the trouble to think through this school crisis honestly and positively.

For an editor who has the courage and integrity to speak the truth as he sees it and to open the columns of his paper for "free and open discussion."

For the men of good will of both races who, despite the "snarls and breast-beatings" of politicians and extremists, are quietly going ahead with the determination to save our public schools in accord with the laws of the land.

KATHERINE HOCKING.

Atlanta—I suppose it is easy for Sen. Richard B. Russell, a bachelor, to consign a generation of Georgians to an educational void for reasons of his own political expediency.

However, it is the parents who will stand amidst the ashes of public education, knowing the price of power for the Russells and the Byrds was paid for with the futures of their children.

ANNE D. BOWEN.

Atlanta—I notice that Kay McLeod says that "Atlanta clergymen will not permit their church buildings to be used for classrooms if the motive is to circumvent court-ordered integration of public schools."

I am not in position to say anything about any denomination except the Presbyterian, but having been an officer in the Presbyterian church for 58 years, I am a little surprised that any Presbyterian clergyman would make that statement. They all know as well as I that they have absolutely no voice in the control of Presbyterian churches, manes or any other property belonging to the churches, as it belongs to the church members and not to the clergy.

In saying "no" to any possible pay raise for himself, Gov. Ernest Vandiver is insuring his moral right to turn thumbs down on pay increases for others in his administration.

Faced as he is with millions of dollars' worth of commitments beyond anticipated state income, Mr. Vandiver perhaps had no other course. But some of our current state officials have not been so quick to say: "Do as I do." We have seen repeated instances of flagrant and unnecessary spending that can only be explained as utter disregard for the public's purse.

It is most reassuring to know that Mr. Vandiver, even before he takes office, is turning a deaf ear to a special House committee studying pay raises for state officials.

Republican 'Pros' 'Tell Off' Business

WASHINGTON—The professional leadership of the Republican Party, largely controlled by Vice President Richard M. Nixon, has firmly adopted a policy of unexamined audacity in "telling off" business. It is as extraordinary as though the Democrats had set out publicly to reprimand labor. Indeed, this is news of a kind that is said to result when man bites dog.

That the Republican pros have undertaken this course of danger—and of Spartan courage—is the best possible index of their fears for the future. The more they examine the whys and wherefores of the Democratic congressional election victories of last month the worse things look to them unless businessmen can be made to "see reason" before the presidential test of 1960.

The considered view of the GOP professionals is this: The insistence by business of putting the so-called right-to-work issue into the recent campaign must not be repeated unless business is ready to see the country go Democratic in 1960—and this for a mere starter.

They suggest that one more round of right-to-work, under Republican sponsorship and at the demand of management, might give the Republicans the dubious satisfaction of being very acceptable to management—but quite unacceptable to the voters for another six to eight years.

Accordingly, what might be called a command decision of calculated risk has been taken by the Republican organization leadership. This is to tell business leaders in the plainest possible way that only two rational courses are really open now:

1. To forget about right-to-work, however heady its attractions in the abstract sense.

2. Or that, if business is going to insist again upon right-to-work, it must be prepared to put into the 1960 presidential campaign precisely the kind of straining, unprecedented push—in terms of exertions and in terms of money—that was put into the fight to re-elect Sen. Robert A. Taft in 1950.

It was in this estimate of the harsh political reality that Meade Alcorn, the GOP national chairman, recently went to New York to give the bad news straight to the National Association of Manufacturers. Whatever a nifty body wanted to say about the inherent merit of right-to-work, Alcorn observed to these business bigwigs, this was the bald, bare meaning of the tale:

"A majority of the voters said emphatically that they don't want right-to-work, and as a consequence the political careers of some of the nation's ablest public servants (Republicans, of course) were shattered."

This was only the beginning of a new GOP leadership effort to change business' view of what is good for business, the Republican Party and the country. And it was comparable to some unimaginable scene which might find Paul Butler, the Democratic chairman, announcing to a convention of the CIO-AFL that the Democrats had now heard altogether too much about things like union security.

Petty Annoyances Gum Life's Tempo

I read about a tree which successfully stood against storms but was felled by some little bugs which got into it. There are people who successfully handle major problems but let little things keep them upset. Below I am listing some of the "petty" irritations I am working on.

The person who meets you on the street or calls you on the phone and begins with "Do you know who I am?" It may be some person I met once along with a hundred other people. In Alabama recently it was a girl with whom I was in high school. It is amazing how much difference 25 years and four children can make.

When eating in a public place, it is most annoying for some friend to stop at your table and start a long conversation. You invite him to sit down, but he is just going to say a "word." Politeness requires that you stand with him and when he finally leaves, your coffee is cold and your digestive nerves are in no mood for food.

Driving in the city, I make it a practice to stop at all red lights and not to start again until the light turns green. Frequently some eager-beaver is in the car behind and the moment a glimmer of yellow shows, he starts honking his horn. I often have the urge to back up and bump him real hard but so far have not done so.

There are people who feel it their duty to lecture me about "how hard I work." The good Lord gave each of us 24 hours a day. I try to sleep eight of those hours and I eat three meals a day. I plan as carefully as I can the rest of my time and do the things I either want to do or feel I ought to do.

I love babies but a baby in church is out of place. No baby enjoys a sermon and they are present enough to let everyone present know of their discomfort. It is not fair to let one baby or small child disturb the worship of several hundred people. Maybe some day I will be able to notice this disturbance, but I have a long way to go yet.

Not long ago I was talking with Norman Vincent Peale. I said, "Doctor, I have a problem." Anxiously he asked, "What is it?" I told him it gets on my nerves for so many people to tell me they had rather hear my wife speak than he. He said, "You know, I have that same problem. If you find the answer, let me know."

I have made a lot of speeches at banquets. Next to the annoyance of a toastmaster who takes up most of the time are the dishwashers who talk so loud in the kitchen that the people cannot hear what the speaker is saying. Why can't they wait until after the program is over to clear the tables and wash the dishes?

I have some others, but these are the ones I am working frantically on just now.

Russian Embassy Thrives in Mexico

MEXICO CITY—Foreign Communists continue to find Mexico an easy and valuable base from which to operate—and they are operating on a large scale today. Mexico provides not only a welcome haven when things get too hot at home—there are at least 100 Communist families from the United States here right now—but also a strategic spot from which to mount subversive activities throughout the Western Hemisphere.

For years the Mexican government has given safe harbor for foreign Communists—as well as revolutionaries of the extreme right—on the theory that it was applying the respected and humane concept of asylum for those suffering political persecution.

What Mexican leaders do not choose to recognize is that there is a vast difference between providing asylum for those who are persecuted and providing asylum for those who use this privilege to prepare persecution against others.

This is the way the great liberal tradition of political asylum is being abused here today. The record is perfectly clear on that.

For five years Mexico harbored some 100 to 150 Venezuelan Communist leaders assembled under the direction of the Soviet Embassy. They carried on subversion against their country from within Mexico and the dangerous rise of communism in Venezuela came from services rendered while Mexico was making it safe for them to operate. They have now made their way back to Venezuela.

There is a group of at least eight Guatemalan Communists who are doing the same thing and are waiting only the timely moment to return.

The adult United States Communist population here hovers around 200 most of the time. Once in a while a U.S. Communist, as in the recent case of Gus Hall, is handed over to U.S. authorities. But this is a rarity.

Moscow maintains a busy and bustling Embassy in Mexico City, one of its largest in the Western Hemisphere, to direct and to energize subversive operations.

The clandestine character of much of the Soviet Embassy's role here is illustrated by its extremely tight operations. It does not permit itself to employ a single Mexican national to do even the most menial caretaking work.

The Soviet Embassy has 10 officers on its military staff among whom are three naval captains—this in a country whose navy is virtually nonexistent. This staff is obviously more concerned with what military secrets it can procure from the United States than from Mexico, particularly since the border is so easy to cross by agents who serve the Soviets here in Mexico.

Legislator Hints Job Cutback

pealed before any new appropriations bill could be passed.

CENTRAL AGENCY

Sanders raised the possibility of a plan to centralize budgeting and purchasing under one central agency. He pointed out, as an example, that the state spends some $2,500,000 annually for printing, with "each department just going out and getting its printing done with no central control."

He was asked if he thought a bill setting up such a central financing agency would pass the House and Senate.

"It certainly should be considered," the senator replied.

Twitty also said that 5 and 10 per cent could be saved in the State Purchasing Department if a strict bidding system were used. Sanders said that he would recommend legislation to improve purchasing procedures by the state.

Sanders said that reorganization was "definite" for many departments of the state government. "Gov.-elect Vandiver is as sincere as a man can be in trying to cut expenses," he said.

USE OF EXPERTS

Twitty advocated the use of experts on a budgetary commission to study each department's budget before approval. "North Carolina put such a plan into operation and saved 11 million dollars the first year," he said.

Sanders said the only way to have an efficient highway department is to get the "highest type of individual" for the job of commissioner.

"Under Jim Gillis the Highway Department will be operating under an experienced hand. We also need to develop career people among the engineers, and some way remove the department from political influence," he said.

Twitty said that some formula was needed to make sure that all counties get their equitable share of road funds. "The formula would have to include the amount of paving already down, the geographical size of the county and the population," he explained.

PAY-AS-YOU-GO

Sanders advocated a "pay-as-you-go" plan of highway financing.

"There is no provision made for maintenance under authority type of financing," he said. "The counties are not equipped for maintaining the roads now being built."

Twitty said the upcoming legislature would be better able to study bills than in the past.

First Lt. Thomas Caugheel of the Ohio National Guard made a perfect landing.

The Ohio guardsman was en route to Dobbins from Palm Beach Air Force Base when he experienced the flame-out at 24,000 feet several miles from the field.

(The term "flame-out" is used by airmen when the jet engine which propels the airplane loses its power and the flame which supplies the thrust goes out.)

Although Lt. Caugheel's landing was unrehearsed, to the spectators it appeared to be just another part of an open-house program being held at the base. Then the public address announcement told the story.

Dobbins' "citizen-airmen" 1,800 strong — displayed their defense readiness in the day's open-house activities, which climaxed Air Reserve Forces Week, as proclaimed by Gov. Griffin, in celebration of the 10th anniversary of the Continental Air Command and the observance of the anniversary of the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor. Similar demonstrations were performed at Robins AFB and Warner Robins.

Will Have Only Hours, CD Warned

Military preparedness, a matter of years when the United States was facing World War I, now is a matter of hours, Maj. Gen. Frank S. Bowen Jr., commander of the XII Corps of the U.S. Army Reserve, said Sunday.

Gen. Bowen, speaking before a crowd of several hundreds at the Tower Theater, emphasized that the Civil Defense organization could serve as a basis for a wartime defense body if the United States were attacked.

REMAINED NEUTRAL

All Europe went into turmoil in 1914 with the assassination of Archduke Ferdinand, Bowen said, but the United States remained neutral for three years, preparing to enter the conflict.

In 1939, Hitler's invasion in Europe and the partition of Poland by Germany and Russia brought England into World War II, while the United States began a weak form of mobilization, "Time ran out on Dec. 7, 1941, when the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor," Bowen said.

KOREAN PENINSULAS

In 1941, the United States was caught in the middle of its mobilization program, and in 1950, United States forces had only six months to mobilize in order to keep from being driven from the Korean peninsula, he added.

Mayor Is Hoping C of C Backs Race Panel Plan

Mayor William Hartsfield expressed hope Sunday night that Atlanta's Chamber of Commerce will take "immediate action" on the Fulton County Grand Jury's recommendations to create committees to study the city's race problems.

The Grand Jury made its recommendations Saturday in a special presentation.

Chamber president John J. McDonough said he would have "to study" the jury's recommendations more before he could offer any comment.

Rep. M. M. (Muggsy) Smith of the Fulton County delegation said the proposal to form the committees was "a good idea."

He said that different groups had been studying the race problems informally for some time.

"There needs to be a meeting of the minds if we are going to iron out our differences and get this school business straightened out," Smith added.

He said that the most pressing segregation-integration question at the moment is the one swirling around the school-closing controversy.

"The people have got to wake up and save the schools," he said.

Mayor Hartsfield said Atlanta's business has a "tremendous stake" in racial harmony.

"I have been told that the holiday retail trade in downtown Montgomery (Ala.) fell off nearly $2,000,000 during the late bus fight," the mayor said.

"I have also been informed that there has not been a single new large business opening up in

THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION, Monday, December 8, 1958 5

Little Rock for the past year."

Hartsfield said that if Atlanta's schools closed the city would lose $1,600,000 per month in payrolls.

"Rural counties would suffer even more since their schools often form the biggest payroll in the county, most of which is paid by the state."

"Such a committee is highly in order because business will be the chief sufferer in terms of money should race relations get out of hand. My administration has striven hard to keep harmonious relations, and we offer the Chamber of Commerce our full cooperation and support," Hartsfield concluded.

Smith was the only Fulton legislator available for comment Sunday.

EAL Strike Conferees Silent on Talks Progress

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—Eastern Air Lines and its striking machinists parleyed Sunday but conferees were silent on whether progress had been made.

No meeting was held between EAL and flight engineers who also struck last Nov. 24 in separate disputes which shut the big carrier's operation down in all 124 cities it serves.

Eastern offered last week to meet the International Assn. of Machinists' demand for top pay boosts of 44 to 49 cents an hour. Union officials said this was not acceptable because the offer did not resolve differences over fringe benefits and retroactive pay.

The engineers struck in disputes over company efforts to give them basic pilot training, and wage differences.

Vote Means Deadlock in Little Rock

Board's Hands Tied, Anyway

By CLAUDE SITTON

(Copyright, 1958, The New York Times Co.) LITTLE ROCK, Ark.—The election of three moderates and three segregationists to the Little Rock School Board has created a potential deadlock and promised little hope for an early solution to the city's education problems.

Even if the board members chosen Saturday in relatively light balloting could reach agreement on a plan to open the four high schools, they would be powerless to act without the approval of Gov. Orval E. Faubus.

FAUBUS ADAMANT

Faubus has maintained an adamant stand against such a step since he invoked a new closure law in September after the United States Supreme Court ordered six Negroes readmitted to Central High School.

The victories of the three moderates did raise hopes among the governor's critics that public reaction had set in against his position.

Faubus had given tacit support to a six-man ticket endorsed by the Capital Citizens Council, an organization of white supremacists. In an election-eve statement, he attacked the five moderates in the race as the "integration slate."

One of the pro-Faubus candidates had no opposition and the other two won by only small margins.

PROTEST VOTE?

Some observers contended that the results represented a protest against the governor and his policies. Others said it simply demonstrated the unwillingness of some of the voters to entrust the school system to the candidates supported by the council.

The first problem to be faced by the new members is that posed by a recent ruling of the Eighth Circuit Court of Appeals in the Little Rock case.

He will be 68 years and 55 days old, breaking the record previously held by William Henry Harrison, who was 68 years and 54 days old when he died in office.

President Harrison still holds one record—he died after only 31 days in office, shortest term in history.

WASHINGTON (AP)—Counterfeiters are doing their Christmas shopping early this year.

The Secret Service disclosed Sunday it has uncovered 122 new issues of bogus bills since July, eight of them during the past week.

Most were rounded up before they got into circulation. But $120,000 worth was seized in circulation between July and October, compared with $443,000 during the previous 12 months.

STEADY INCREASE

U. E. Baughman, chief of the Secret Service, said it all added up to a steady increase in counterfeiting over the past 18 months. He warned merchants and others who handle money to watch out for phony currency as the Christmas shopping rush heightens.

Baughman said counterfeiting reaches a seasonal peak at Christmas, when stores are crowded, shoppers and clerks hurried and many retail counters manned by inexperienced temporary workers.

SECRET SERVICE

He said that, between July 1 and Oct. 31 the Secret Service seized $947,000 in counterfeit currency, in and out of circulation.

He said counterfeiters are having more success in bilking the

Robber Gets $60 At Fruit Stand

A northeast Atlanta curb market was held up Sunday.

The manager of the Tropical Grove fruit stand at 421 Ponce de Leon Ave., NE, L. S. Lovvorn, 60, told police he opened the cash register and a robber scooped up about $60 in bills, then ordered him into a back room.

"Now stay here until I'm gone," the robber was quoted. But before he left, he said, politely: "I sure thank you, Bud."

3 Truck Drivers Die Mysteriously At Bunk House Within 48 Hours

LANCASTER, Mo. (AP)—Three drivers for a Malvern, Ark., trucking company have been found dead in the same bunk house here in the last 48 hours.

Louis Lee Warden, 24, Little Rock, Ark., was found dead Friday afternoon. His employer, D. W. Hoskins, sent two more drivers here Saturday to pick up Warden's truck. They were found dead this morning.

Coroner Bryce Norman said the cause of the deaths was not known.

HEART AILMENT

Warden had a heart ailment, the coroner said, and told attendants at Ed Judd's Truck Stop on U.S. 63 that he was sick when he arrived with a truckload of farm tractors at 1 a.m. Friday.

Warden went to bed in an 18-by-24 foot bunk house Judd maintains for his service station employees and sleepy truckers. Attendants discovered the man was dead about 4 or 5 p.m. Friday. The body was returned to Little Rock.

John Parker, 26, Little Rock, and William Briner, 22, Malvern, arrived about 4 p.m. with a truckload of lumber. One was to take the lumber on north and the other was to take Warden's truck back to Malvern.

WENT TO EAT

The coroner said Parker, Briner and some of Judd's employees sat around and talked in the bunk house until about 9 p.m., when they all went over to eat at Judd's restaurant.

The two truckers went back to the bunk house between midnight and 1 a.m. and went to bed. They were found dead at about 7 a.m. Sunday.

Autopsies were performed on Parker and Briner but the cause of death was not determined, Norman said. He said the highway patrol's laboratory in Jefferson City would make some tests and the results would be known in a day or two.

Norman said he had asked a state gas inspector to inspect the bunk house for possible lethal fumes.

The coroner said the place is heated by a stove burning bottled gas. There is a bathroom and four or five beds in the building, of frame construction with a concrete floor.

The Georgia Power Company, in cooperation with the Agricultural Extension Service, sponsors the 4-H Club Corn Program. Since its beginning in 1947 the program has enrolled 1,728 boys.

Corn is important to Georgia. More acres are devoted to it than to any other crop, and it has the greatest dollar value.

This year the state's corn yield, total and per acre, was the greatest in history, and the 4-H Club members grew about three times as much per acre as the state's average. They have done this for 12 consecutive years.

The Georgia 4-H Club Corn Program has far-reaching effect. It is only one of half a dozen programs we sponsor each year for Georgia's farm youth.

Car Falls on Youth; 'I'm Lucky,' He Says

By JAMES SHEPPARD

"Gee, I'm lucky."

Charles Olin Arledge, 20, lay elevated on his bed at St. Joseph Infirmary Sunday night and talked happily about a falling car which could easily have cost him his life. A few hours earlier he lay pinned beneath about 3,400 pounds of metal.

Charlie, a freshman in mechanical engineering night classes at Georgia Tech, had picked up his buddy, Tony Turco, 20, and they had driven Charlie's car to a service station at Piedmont avenue and 10th street, NE.

Charlie had his tool kit to work on his jalopy, a favorite hobby. "I am what is known as a Sunday afternoon mechanic," Charlie laughed. "I work weekdays and go to school night and only have time to tinker around with the car on weekends."

FELL OFF JACK
The mechanics enthusiast rolled up his sleeves, hoisted his 1950 Mercury with the hydraulic jack and crawled underneath. While Charlie worked with a wrench, Tony stood nearby and talked to him. Then bam!

The car crashed down on Charlie. It had fallen off the jack. Charlie was trapped. And he was hurt.

"Tony," he yelled, but Tony had already run for help. He brought back four strong men who helped him pick the car up and held it up while he pulled Charlie out.

LUCKY, HE SAYS
X rays showed his left shoulder separated from his collarbone and the collarbone broken; four fractured ribs, a few minor cuts, lots of bruises, and a punctured left lung.

"The boy will be okay," his doctor assured. "His legs weren't broken and he'll probably be out of that bed walking around Monday."

"I was lying on my right side working with my left hand," Charlie recalled. "I was laying just in front of the back wheel. The axle didn't catch me, was caught under the frame. . . ."

A pretty nurse interrupted Charlie to bring him a tray of soft food for supper, and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Arledge, of 1022 Juniper St., NE, and his friend Tony, and his sweetheart, Miss Jeanine Cummings, 19, tried to help make him comfortable as he munched a poached egg on buttered toast.

"... Now, if I had been lying just an inch or so back, under the axle, don't think I'd be here now," he smiled, looking up from the tray. "Gee, I'm lucky!"

Rev. Fifiel Cites Challenge of the 1860s

Christian moral standards oppose making a profitable business out of alcoholic beverages or gambling or some other morally destructive business, then a society whose values are largely material is bound to produce some opposition and some persecution," Dr. Fifiel said.

Dr. Fifiel based his sermon on the Beatitudes: "Blessed are they which are persecuted for righteousness' sake: for theirs is the kingdom of heaven."

SOCIAL REFORMER

"The social reformer, the moral prophet, the Christian businessman or political leader, the editor championing Christian principal, the teacher holding forth the truth, the preacher applying Christian doctrine to live issues will inevitably be confronted with persecution," Dr. Fifiel said. "But there is the Master's assurance that blessed are the persecuted."

"Blessed are they who refuse to pull down their colors and surrender their convictions when the going is difficult. You cannot simply surrender and remain a Christian," Dr. Fifiel continued.

Dr. Roy O. McClain, pastor of the First Baptist Church, continued his series of sermons pertaining to the racial question. His sermon Sunday, entitled "Thy Neighbor as Thyself," was the third in a series of four sermons.

THE SAMARITAN
Dr. Fifiel raised the question in his sermon, "Who is my neighbor that I am to love as myself?" The Baptist minister related Jesus' parable of the Samaritan—the good deed done by the social outcast.

"Jesus recognized no fences around anyone," Dr. McClain said. "We build our sociological fences as they did in Biblical times, but Jesus tears them down."

"Who is my neighbor? Anyone to whom I can be a neighbor," Dr. McClain said. "There is a current saying, 'I like Mr. X in his place.' Who gave any group the right to assign places in God's world?" Dr. McClain asked.

Dr. McClain said that the standard of love raised by Christ could be judged by the words "as thyself."

GOOD WILL

"This not an affectionate passion, but love from the highest moral consideration without self-interest and with intelligent good will," Dr. McClain said. "The only alternative to love is hate. The last 36 months have seen more belligerence engendered among people than any recent decade. There is no such thing as neutrality. Neutrality is to ignore and a failure to love is to hate."

"Love is the only way out of our present predicament," Dr. McClain continued. "Love has never been given a reasonable trial by a majority of people. A belligerent attitude will forever snarl our efforts to work out any solution."

Dr. McClain said his next Sunday's sermon will be based on the Golden Rule. "I have paraphrased it to, 'Do unto others as though you were the others.'"

PEACEMAKER ROLE

While not referring directly to the racial situation, the Rev. James W. Dyer of Southwest Christian Church preached Sunday morning on the subject of "Peacemakers." He described the role of the Christian: "To stand for truth and right" in any situation in an effort to bring about a harmonious solution in any controversy.

He said later that his remarks were made in hope that they "Know what I'm giving Daddy for Christmas?"

A clay ash tray, shaped by childish hands and a heart full of love? A calendar sticky with glue and March for the first month?

These are truly precious gifts—proudly given, tenderly received. Small tokens of a child's great love.

And a father's love for his child—how is that expressed? By a pile of gifts under the tree, a ride on Daddy's shoulders, a mended airplane.

Perhaps the surest measure of a father's love is something he may never see in use—his life insurance.

Democrat Council Asks Laws To Prevent School Closures

it concerns House and Senate rules.

The document was the recommendation of such leaders as former President Truman; Adlai E. Stevenson, the 1952 and 1956 presidential nominee; Gov. Harriman of New York; Gov. G. Mennen Williams of Michigan and former Sen. Herbert H. Lehman of New York.

The drafting work continued until a late hour Sunday and the final text of the recommendations will be made public later.

NEW RULES

The Advisory Council declared the Senate ought to be able to adopt new rules with each Congress.

One of these new rules would permit the ending of filibusters by a majority of the Senate's total membership. The present rule, favored by Southern Democrats, requires two-thirds of the Senate's total membership to close debate.

The text also urged that House rules be revised to limit the power of the rules committee so that a majority of the members could call up for consideration bills pigeonholed by the rules group.

In the field of civil rights, and especially the question of Southern schools to prevent integration of white and Negro students, one proposal called for effective federal action to reopen these schools.

RESOURCES ASKED

A suggestion was that the Congress provide additional resources, both technical and financial, to state and local school officials in communities or states where schools have been shut to avoid integration.

The policy statement also called for enactment of a section struck out of the 1957 civil rights law, so as to authorize the U.S. attorney general to start civil suits against anyone who deprives American citizens of "their rights to equal protection of the laws, on account of race, color, religion, or national origin."

OUTLAW LAWS

Another proposal was federal legislation to outlaw the use of mails for the distribution of literature designed to inflame racial and religious prejudices for the purpose of inciting violence.

The council asserted the party's overwhelming victories in the congressional elections placed on the party "great opportunities and responsibilities."

The Democrats urged such things as broadening the Social Security program, fighting inflation, and the high cost of living, boosting the national minimum wage, putting through a housing program, and a constant review of the tax laws.

The Democrats omitted any call for a tax boost or reduction, but did say that inequities and

Science Shrinks Piles New Way Without Surgery Stops Itch—Relieves Pain

New York, N. Y. (Special)—For the first time science has found a new healing substance with the astonishing ability to shrink hemorrhoids, stop itching, and relieve pain—without surgery.

In one hemorrhoid case after another, "very striking improvement" was reported and verified by doctors' observations.

Pain was relieved promptly. And, while gently relieving pain, actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place. And most amazing of all—this improvement was maintained in cases where doctors' observations were continued over a period of many months!

In fact, results were so thorough that sufferers were able to make such astonishing statements as "Piles have ceased to be loop-holes must be readjusted.

"Under our Constitution, we must necessarily have a Republican administration for two more years," the council said. "The Congress must of necessity co-operate with this administration. The effort must be to lead the administration into making the best efforts of which it is capable."

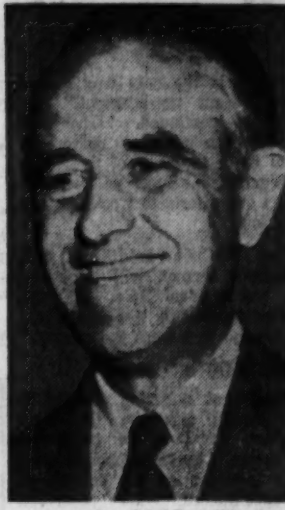

Proceeding from this foreword, the Democrats sharply criticized the Eisenhower administration for failing to meet the challenge of the Soviet "economic offensive" and for failing to keep the nation strong economically and militarily.

Paul M. Butler, Democratic national chairman, called the advisory council statement the "most comprehensive" yet made by that group, and said it marked the "coming of age" of the group.

Butler said the attendance at Sunday's session was the largest in its history.

Others in attendance included Gov. Stephen L. R. McNichols of Colorado, Jacob M. Arvey of Illinois, Miss Katherine M. Oulman of Rhode Island, Mrs. B. B. Everett of North Carolina, Camille F. Gravel Jr. of Louisiana, Leo C. Graybill of Montana, Mrs. Margaret Price of Michigan, Calvin W. Rawlings of Utah, Mrs. Marguerite Peyton a business background and a businessman's distaste for inefficient operations, pushed the new North Carolina program.

Among other things, he persuaded legislators to abolish the old 14-man Highway Board on which each commissioner was pretty much a king in his own district. This was replaced with a board of seven appointed from the state at large.

W. F. Babcock, an engineering graduate of MIT and an N.C. State faculty member who had specialized in traffic problems, was named by the new commission to serve as full-time director of highways.

The commission is still a policy-making body. And each member has a certain number of counties in which he is assigned to explain the highway program and to hear persons with road problems.

POLITICS OUT

But the weight of political influence in obtaining roads has all but been eliminated by a priority system for rural roads.

It was estimated that it would take $600 million to pave all rural roads in the state, and all the highway budget to maintain them. Therefore a line had to be drawn: only roads with 50 or more vehicles per day traffic were considered.

Each of these 50-vehicles-per-day roads was then rated according to the following characteristics:

1. Average 24-hour traffic count.
2. Adjacent land use—number of homes, stores, factories, schools, etc., along the way.
3. Public service characteristics—whether the road served school, mail or commercial vehicles; gave access to parks, cemeteries or recreational areas.

After the rating, roads were a problem!" And among these sufferers were a very wide variety of hemorrhoid conditions, some of 10 to 20 years' standing. All this, without the use of narcotics, anesthetics or astringents of any kind. The secret is a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne®)—the discovery of a world-famous research institution. Already, Bio-Dyne is in wide use for healing injured tissue on all parts of the body. This new healing substance is offered in suppository or ointment form called Preparation H. from state tax receipts for distribution to counties for road work, but it has no systematic, long-range rural roads program.

Much of the money for rural roads work in Southeast Empire states comes from "dedicated" funds—tax receipts which may be used for no other purpose. The formulas vary greatly from state to state.

One other point of interest to Georgia: so-called "county contracts," under which the state pays counties to do road work under the state system, are rare in the Southeast Empire. And when they are used, it is generally under strict state supervision.

How other states get their money's worth on purchasing.

given priority ratings and the listings well publicized in each county. The rating is rechecked from time to time at requests of those living on the roads.

Once the system is thus designated, how are funds distributed? First, the cost of paving all 50-vehicles-per-day roads in the state was estimated to be $124 million. Since $8 million, or about 6.45 per cent of the total need, was available each year, then each county was allotted 6.45 per cent of its need each year.

EXAMPLE CITED

For example, if the total need of county "A" is $1 million and of county "B" $100,000, then "A" would be credited $64,500 a year and "B" $6,450 a year.

Even roads with less than 50 vehicles per day are maintained with all-weather surfacing, adequate drainage, 8-ton-load bridges and minimum roadway widths. Another $8 million a year is credited to the counties for this purpose.

Two other divisions of North Carolina's secondary road system are subdivision streets and municipal connecting links. The state will not build subdivision roads but will maintain them outside city limits provided they meet minimum standards. It will build municipal connecting roads where need is established.

PUBLIC RELATIONS

These three categories of secondary roads represent some 58,000 miles of the state's 70,000-mile road system.

To explain the new programs, the Highway Board holds many meetings outside Raleigh. In addition, it has a top-notch public relations program to publicize its work.

Tennessee does not have quite so complete a priority plan for rural roads, but three years ago the Automotive Safety Foundation designated a Rural Roads system which would serve general traffic; school, mail and commercial routes, and put every house in the state within two miles of an oiled road.

FORMULA

In Tennessee, $6 million a year matches another $6 million in federal secondary money and is distributed for rural roads on this formula: 1/3 area, 1/3 rural population, 1/3 county road mileage.

Some $11 million in 100 per cent state aid is distributed 50 per cent equally among the counties, 25 per cent according to area and 25 per cent according to population.

In Alabama a few years ago, each county designated 100 miles as its own farm-to-market road system. The counties get some 100 per cent state aid for these roads, some federal money.

U.S. AID OFF

The amount of money distributed under this program is unsystematic, however. During the past year, Gov. Folsom raised 100 per cent state aid from $2 million to $13 million—thereby drastically reducing 90-10 interstate money available from the federal government.

Florida, like Georgia, sets aside several million dollars a year

Wagon Train Rolls Ahead of Gunsmoke

By PAUL JONES

Gunsmoke, which has become more of a Saturday night habit than the traditional bath, has been topped for the first time in I'd say at least three years, in the Nielsen ratings.

The Nielsen chart is the one to which most of the guys and gals in television look for their meat and potatoes. And I think it is significant that this show which recognized as one of the best of all the hoof operas has been topped.

Who knocked the king off the throne? Another western by the name of Wagon Train.

Now this does not mean that one is a better show than the other because they are seen at different times. Wagon Train is the Wednesday night shoot-em-up which has clobbered Larry Welk and which last year knocked Disneyland out of the park. Gunsmoke, as everybody knows, is the Saturday night piece-de-resistance.

There is a parallel somewhere. I think it lies in the fact that both of these shows are underwritten, under-played and directed and produced with restraint.

You might say that both shows are classic Westerns—the kind of outdoor drama an old cowboy like Gary Cooper might like to watch.

Certainly you don't hear any of the old clichés which have been worked to death in some of the movie Westerns and on the more hastily written and produced TV westerns.

There also is a dimension of reality in both. It is not hard to live the drama with either Wagon Train or Gunsmoke.

The stars of each of these shows are perfectly suited for their roles. The supporting players have a definite place in the activity, they're not put there simply for atmosphere or because they can grow a photo-genic beard.

SO BOTH WAGON TRAIN and Gunsmoke are champions. I wish there was some way to have them tie for first place so that they both would get equal billing in the rating charts.

I am a sucker for a good Western and I think as long as the writers, cameramen, directors and the players can maintain the quality in these shows that they have shown in the past, they will continue to stay on top of the heap.

I even like some of the other Top Ten shows. Sugarfoot, Rifleman, (remember I predicted when I was in Hollywood that this would become one of the biggest shows on TV), Have Gun, Will Travel and Maverick.

I am even glad that Ed Sullivan has moved back among the Top Ten shows for I watch this show fairly regularly. I am especially glad that Perry Como made the first team. He's the greatest. Danny Thomas is the 10th and one of the best.

I still agree with Nielsen that Gunsmoke and Wagon Train are two of the best shows on television.

Do you agree?

HERE'S THE ANSWER to the Channel 5 quiz: Sarah Marshall is the daughter of Herbert Marshall. I obtained this information from Lewis Funke, Drama Editor of the New York Times.

OH, WHAT HE SAID—Perry Como, who is Catholic, made a slip of the tongue, the Saturday after Thanksgiving. I meant to mention it sooner but it slipped my tongue. He said that he had turkey for Thanksgiving and "yesterday (which was Friday) we had turkey hash."

Oh, well, his writers just couldn't resist inserting a line about turkey hash.

JEAN HESTER of Kennesaw writes: "I disagreed with you saying Mollifieri is the most popular dancer on Bandstand. This contest was a No. 3. Justine Correlli and Bob Clayton won No. 1; Ken Rossi and Arlene Sullivan won No. 2.

"When Dick Clark was on vacation Arlene Sullivan received gifts from all over the country from fans. Arlene certainly has beauty, a smile and she can waltz. My vote goes for Arlene Sullivan. Perhaps you are not a regular viewer."

Oh, yes I am.

Hayden's Back for Points Beyond

PAUL JONES PICK OF THE DAY—Since Sterling Hayden did such a magnificent job of acting in "Old Man," the Faulkner play the other night, I'm going to recommend the 9:30 p.m. Theater version of "Points Beyond," in which he will be co-starred with Julie Harris.

The play, scheduled at 9:30 p.m. on Channel 2, is about a strange adventure of a couple at an unreal resort. Don't attempt to unravel that plot—just watch the show tonight.

DRAMA

9 a.m. (Ch. 5) Early, Early Show starts today incorporating a game entitled "Watch and Win." Feature film on the Early, Early Show this morning is "A Night of Adventure," with Tom Conway, dealing with a criminal lawyer whose wife, feeling neglected while her husband trails crooks for the FBI, starts going out with an artist. Early, Early Show host Jerry Ross explains the new "Watch and Win" game.

11 a.m. (Channel 11)—A recently bereaved woman refuses to hand over the contents of her husband's safe deposit box when a woman whom she has never seen before turns up with the key, in Day in Court.

4 p.m. (Ch. 5) Today on the "Brighter Day," the danger signals of a shaky marriage are recognized by hindsight, when a distraught husband appeals for help in repairing his broken marriage.

4:30 p.m. (Ch. 5) Hugh takes an important step when he consults Mike Carr on "The Edge of Night."

5:30 p.m. (Ch. 5) Jealousy leads a magician to set a diabolical death-trap for his wife in "The Mask of Dillon," with Erich von Stroheim, Jeanne Bates, and William Wright.

6 p.m. (Channel 2)—Jack Larsen, as Jimmy Olson, learns the painful lesson that sleuthing is no job for a youthful amateur in "Semi-Private Eye" on Superman.

6:30 p.m. (Channel 11)—Lassie becomes a mother. It's the first litter.

7 p.m. (Channel 2)—Battling against the flailing fists and deadly rifle of a giant French-Canadian trapper, a youthful Kit Carson fights to protect a pretty Indian girl and win himself a wife on Death Valley Days.

8 p.m. (Channel 2)—Vint Bonner runs into trouble when he brings a Southern boy, orphaned by the Civil War, to live with relatives in the North on Restless Gun.

8 p.m. (Channel 5)—After death the father of a young girl who has ordered Bill Longley to help the dying man at gunpoint, is revealed as the man who robbed a local express office, on the "Texan."

8:30 p.m. (Channel 5)—Margaret Anderson wins an expensive new car in a raffle staged for the benefit of a children's home on "Father Knows Best," and plans to take some of the children from the home on a picnic.

8:30 p.m. (Channel 11)—The second dramatic chapter in a Seattle school mistress' safari through the jungles and mountains of Africa will be seen on Bold Journey.

9 p.m. (Channel 2)—Peter himself narrowly misses becoming a human torch when a pre-ty young widow hires him to find the firebug killer of her husband in "The Torch" on Peter Gunn.

SPECIAL

6:30 a.m. (Channel 2)—Dr. Harvey E. White, regular teacher of the college-level course in atomic physics, will discuss "Hooke's Law" on Continental Classroom.

VARIETY

7:00 a.m. (Channel 2)—Morton Da Costa, director of both the stage and film versions of "Auntie Mame," and C. Wright Mills, author of "Eight Causes of World War III," will be interviewed on Today.

1 p.m. (Channel 11)—Liberalism plays "Sleigh Ride" and "The Day the Rains Came."

4 p.m. (Channel 11)—Singer Malcolm Dodds is guest on

The Doc Makes Like Bear

It looks as though Alabama's basketball team is picking up where Alabama's football team left off.

Undoubtedly the most surprising score to hum along the sports wires Saturday night announced the Crimson Tide's 39-38 victory over the Phillips Oilers, a perennial AAU power.

Logue

"Of course, any time we go on the court, we always think we have a chance to win," he began. "In all fairness, though, we probably caught them a little off their shooting form. The ball just bounced our way, I guess. We even got two or three more rebounds.

Bama Hustle Beats Phillips Oilers

"Clyde Frederick, a 6-6 Birmingham sophomore, deserves a lot of credit for his work on the boards. Frederick didn't score any points, but he got 10 rebounds and set up the winning point. He's a distant cousin of Auburn's Rex Frederick, but he's an inch taller and several pounds heavier than Rex."

The low score indicated that Alabama might have used stalling tactics reminiscent of Mississippi State's seemingly interminable "freezes" last year, but Lambert immediately shattered that theory.

"No. We were trying to shoot the ball," he continued. "We even fast broke a little. But the Oilers are mighty tough defensively. They go over the top of your screens and block shots. Any time you take a bad shot, you might as well drop-kick the ball, so we played for good ones.

"Our boys won on hustle. They outlasted Phillips enough to make the difference. We're encouraged, but we've got work to do.

"Our offense is a little weaker this season, but we hope an improved defense will take some of the strain off of it. We should be about the same rebounding. I don't think we can honestly be rated a contender, but we might make trouble for some who are.

"Tennessee looks awful tough," Lambert said. "They'll run you right down into the boards and then put their feet on your neck. What really hurts is that (6-7 Gene) Tormohlen can run, too.

"I would rate Tennessee about a half a step ahead of Mississippi State and Auburn. Vanderbilt, Auburn and Tech all will be contenders. Tech's chances depend on Dave Denton's (scholastic) status and how his sophomores come along."

After Dr. Lambert replaced the receiver, it was time to find out how the young season was treating Baron Adolph Rupp, coach of Kentucky's defending SEC and national champions.

Baron Busy Educating Sophomores

"You know we will be pretty damn rough three years from now," Rupp commenced from Durham, N.C., where the Wildcats tackle Duke Monday. "But right now we're trying to educate some sophomore personnel."

Kentucky beat Temple in the NCAA semifinals last March, 61-60. The revamped Cats decked the Owls Saturday, 76-71. Is Temple as good?

"Temple is not as good this year," reported the ever-frank Baron. "Their coach said after the game that they played way over their heads against us.

"This little kid Bill Kennedy looked awful good. He's just as good as Guy Rodgers was last year. He gave us a helluva time.

"Don Mills is a better boy this season. He played a beautiful game at center against Temple. Mills has gained 22 pounds, and it helps on the boards.

"Johnny Cox scored 22 points, but he got banged up pretty badly. He has been hit in the head twice in the last two games. Mills' elbow caught him last night, and he has been bothered by bleeding. Cox is at an eye, ear, nose and throat hospital here this afternoon, and we don't know whether he will be ready for Duke.

"The conference will be better this year. Look at last night's scores—our teams are taking care of themselves. The Tennessee score impressed me the most. (Tennessee shelled Wyoming, 90-69). And what about Alabama beating Phillips.

"I've said all along Tennessee, Mississippi State and Auburn are the teams to beat. That Tormohlen is a good, tough boy.

"We have Duke, Southern Methodist, St. Louis and Maryland coming up in a row," the Baron added, "so we should know how we stand pretty fast."

The Baron knows they're out to get him this season, but he's not conceding even a free throw just yet. As he puts it, "If we can win a few more games before getting licked, it will mean a lot to this young team."

Too much, rival coaches are thinking.

SEC PLAYER OF THE WEEK

TORMOHLIN 'BIG MAN' IN VOLS' PLANS

By MICKEY LOGUE

If there is a "hard-nosed" basketball player in the Southeastern Conference, it's Tennessee's Gene Tormohlen.

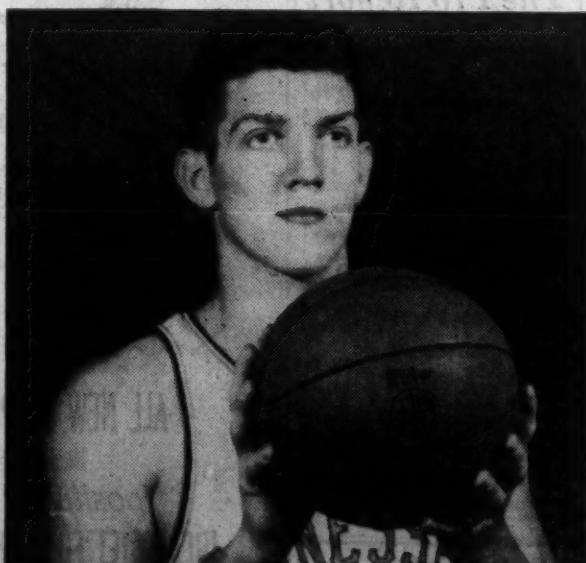

Tormohlen stands 6-7, weighs 220 pounds and is chairman of the boards at every hardwood meeting he attends. He who challenges the Vol center in rebounding competition does so at his own risk.

The fingers of such basketball coaches as Kentucky's Adolph Rupp, Mississippi State's Babe McCarthy and Alabama's Dr. Gene Lambert have singled out the Vols as the team to beat.

Tormohlen literally and physically is the big reason.

After squeaking past Wyoming by one point in Knoxville Tuesday, Coach Emmett Lowery's lads smothered Michigan and that same Wyoming team in points last weekend to win the Midwestern Invitational crown.

Tormohlen's week's output included 66 points, and he averaged nearly 20 rebounds a game. He amassed 25 points and 15 rebounds in Tennessee's

'MOTHER HENS' CALM YOUNG BULLDOGS

Tech, Georgia Senior-Soph Battle Rated Toss-Up

By AL THOMY

Just a week old, the basketball season has already taken an odd bounce here and there.

Here: Fired-up Georgia Tech sophomores are standing around awaiting arrival of seniors.

There: Precocious Georgia sophomores, sometimes boiling like frisky palaminoes, are being held in check by Red Lawson's senior or "Mother Hen" members.

There to here: Lawson's Bulldogs move into Alexander Memorial Coliseum Thursday night for another chapter in Tech-Georgia rivalry, and he and Jacket coach Whack Hyder agree it's a tossup from the tipoff. Tech enters Georgia week with a 1-2 background (victory over Baylor, losses to Georgia Teachers and Louisville); Georgia comes in 2-0 (victims, Clemson and Florida).

Hyder brought back encouraging notes from an unsuccessful (71-57) attempt to bust the Colonels of Louisville.

"We're coming along," reported Hyder Sunday. "Home visitors from Indiana seem to inspire Bud Blenker at Louisville, and he showed signs of coming out of his slump. Shots still refused to drop for Terry Randall, but we're certain he'll hit his stride in a few days. It's just one of those things."

Other encouraging signs?

"Center Frank Inman did a fine rebounding job for us, picked off 12. I believe it was. Sophomores Wayne Richards, Roger Kaiser and John Hoffman gave us good performances. I was very pleased with our foul shooting. We hit 14 in a row before missing four straight.

"We figured if we could rebound evenly with Louisville we had a chance to win. They beat us by seven off the boards. The thing that killed us, though, was (6-11) Fred Sawyer's inside shots after we stopped them from outside. They were a bit more aggressive."

Hyder indicated Richards had earned a starting position for the Georgia game, teaming with fellow soph Kaiser at forwards. The big Augustan has the best shooting percentage on the club . . . 42.3. Blenker is five points under his 38.2 career mark while Randall lags 22 points under his two-year 42.3 standard.

Knute Rockne had his "Seven Mules," Paul Dietzel introduced his 11 "Chinese Bandits" and now Lawson pops up with his "Five Mother Hens" at Athens.

"I call the seniors my 'Mother Hen' squad," Lawson chuckled. "When those sophomores get too exuberant, Fred Edmondson, Joe DeFoor, Sonny Poss, Bobby Chaney and Hugh Holder step in and calm 'em down."

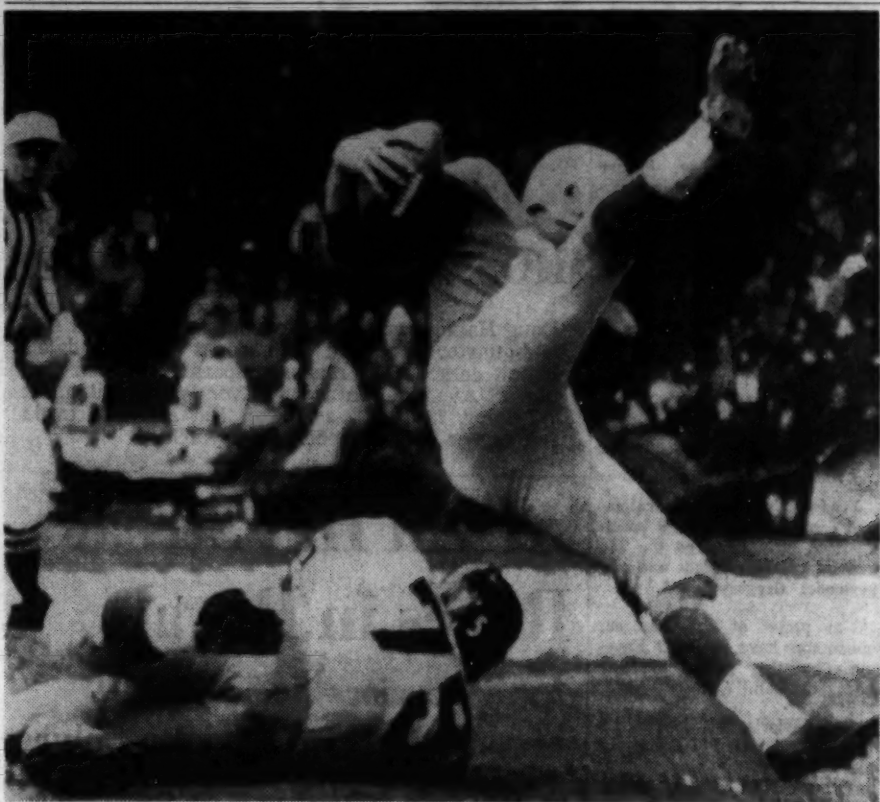

"This team has given me the warmest feeling of my 25 years in the game. Our seniors have a wonderful attitude. They take a keen interest in the sophomores and enjoy helping them, even though all are in the battle for starting positions. It's certainly a refreshing thing."

Lawson wanted to clear up a point. "Don't get me wrong. These seniors are fine athletes, all dependable boys, not just instructors. It's just that they want to help us build for the future."

For a twist, the coaches were called on to appraise Thursday's opponent.

Lawson on Tech: "I don't underestimate this Tech team. Hyder is suffering an ailment that hit us last year—nobody can shoot 'em in. They'll

Jimmy Orr Catches Pass For 55-Yard Touchdown

WASHINGTON (U)—Bobby Layne hurled the Pittsburgh Steelers to a comeback 14-14 tie with the Washington Redskins Sunday on sharpshooting last-half touchdown passes to rookie Jim Orr and veteran Jack McClair.

The scoring pitches atoned for the trouble Layne caused the Steelers in the first half when Bert Zagers intercepted two of his tosses and the Redskins swiftly moved to touchdowns.

Washington's attack collapsed after the intermission and its 14-0 lead vanished as Layne found the range.

The Redskins flubbed a chance to go ahead in the last two minutes when a drive carried to the Steeler 21. Sam Baker's field goal attempt into the wind from the 29 sailed wide.

Tom Miner tried a boot for the Steelers from Washington's 48 with 10 seconds remaining but the ball fell far short.

Don Bosseler scored twice for the Redskins on bulging runs over Pittsburgh . . . 0 0 7 7-14 Washington . . . 0 14 0 0-14 Pittsburgh—TD, Orr (55 pass from Layne), McClair (38 pass from Layne), PAT, Miner 2. Washington—TD, Bosseler 2 (7 run, 2 run), PAT, Baker 2.

Kentucky Invades Duke Seeking Road Win No. 2

Five Other SEC Teams Try Non-Conference Rivals

By MERCER BAILEY

Associated Press Sports Writer

The Kentucky Wildcats, testing their rebuilt basketball muscles against non-league foes, invade Duke Monday night hoping for a second straight road victory.

The defending Southeastern Conference and NCAA Champions, shy four of the starters who shot them to their titles, Although trailing 41-34 at half-time, the Wildcats rallied behind All-America hopeful Johnny Cox and whipped the Owls 76-71. A year ago Kentucky and Temple played three overtime sessions before Kentucky won 85-83. Then in the first round of the final NCAA tournament, the Wildcats squeaked to a 61-60 victory over the Owls.

Five other SEC teams also have games scheduled Monday night, all against outside opposition. Florida plays host to Stetson, Mississippi State is at Arkansas State, Mississippi welcomes Murray (Ky.) State, Vanderbilt is at Missouri and Tulane plays host to Southwestern Louisiana.

Mississippi State, a prime challenger for the SEC crown Kentucky has won or shared 19 times in the past 26 seasons, breezed past Southwestern of The Maroons' Bailey Howell, No. Memphis 91-46 Saturday night. 4 scorer in the nation last season and a leading All-America candidate, poured in 33 points.

Tennessee's Vols, another league title contender, captured the Midwestern Invitational tournament championship at Kent, Ohio, with a 90-69 victory over Wyoming. Big Gene Tormohlen led the way with 25 points.

Auburn ran its collegiate winning streak to 13 with a 71-60 romp past Baylor. Mississippi downed Union 87-81. Tulane trimmed Birmingham Southern 96-76 and Alabama

Quarterback Plum Leads Browns' Win

Cleveland Edges Eagles, 21-14

PHILADELPHIA (U)—Quarterback Milt Plum scored two touchdowns and passed for another Sunday as the Cleveland Browns defeated the charged-up Philadelphia Eagles 21-14 and clinched at least a tie for the National Football League's Eastern Conference title.

A crowd of 36,773 fans sat in sub-freezing weather at Franklin Field as the teams entertained with a hard hitting, wide-open offensive show that was settled on the last play of the third period.

With the scored tied 14-14, Plum rolled out to pass and spotted halfback Ray Renfro 10 yards behind the Philadelphia secondary on the Eagles' 25. Renfro gathered in the perfect heave and ran to the end zone for the winning touchdown.

Lou Groza, the reliable place-kicker who missed two field goal attempts from the 33 and 41 this wintry afternoon, booted his third conversion and it was all over.

Fullback Jimmy Brown, the league's leading ground-gainer, regained the running touch that he appeared to have lost in his last few games. He lugged the ball 21 times for 133 yards. The power running of Brown and the slashes of halfback Lew Carpenter who gained 100 yards on 21 carries, opened the Philadelphia defenses for Plum's passes.

Cleveland . . . 14 9 7 0-21 Philadelphia . . . 14 0 0 0-14 Cleveland—TD, Plum 2 (10 run, one sneak), Renfro (48 pass from Plum), PAT—Groza 3. Philadelphia—TD, MacDonald 2 (26 pass from Van Brocklin, 4 pass from Ramsey), PAT—Walston 2.

troit Lions Sunday and the New York Giants used it for a 19-17 National Football League triumph that kept them in the Eastern Division title race.

Harland Svare had to come through with a victory-saving block of a last-ditch field goal attempt. Svare, a six-year veteran from Washington State, blocked Jim Martin's 25-yard field goal attempt with only one minute and 13 seconds to play.

The first-place Cleveland Browns defeated Philadelphia, 21-14, and the Giants must beat the Browns in next Sunday's finale to tie for the crown.

Dakota Athlete Dies After Heart Attack

GRAND FORKS, N.D. (AP)—Harvey Keena, 21, one of North Dakota's outstanding young athletes, collapsed and died while making a telephone call in a gasoline station Saturday.

Dr. Richard Leigh, Grand Forks County coroner, said death was caused by a heart ailment.

Auburn's Speed and Shooting Paying Off in Easy Buckets

Senior Lee Setting Pace

Everybody knows Auburn has its height and experience problems, but nobody's saying the Tigers can't run and shoot.

Speed and marksmanship have highlighted opening triumphs over Jacksonville State and Baylor.

These basketball essentials appear to travel hand in hand at Auburn.

For instance: Coach Joel Eaves' forces sank 42 of 60 field goal attempts against Jax State for 61 per cent, then drilled home 22 of 39 against Baylor for 56.4 per cent.

Compounding the spectacular, the Tigers bagged eight of the last half missiles directed against Baylor.

Baylor Coach Hails Attack

Layups and close-in shots, both trademarks of Eaves' finely-honed shuffle offense, have dominated Auburn's scoring efforts.

Here's where the speed comes in. The faster the players, obviously, the better chance they have of following Eaves' patterns under the bucket.

Sophomores Ray Groover, Jimmy Fibbe, Porter Gilbert and David Vaughan have flashed exceptional speed, even in the losing exhibition engagement with the Phillips 66 defensive geniuses.

Co-Capt. Jimmy Lee, former all-everything for Baker in Georgia high school circles, can move and leads scorers despite a tricky knee. Lee's guard associate, Henry Hart, isn't caught on a dime very often.

When Rex Frederick returns to duty, the Tigers' velocity will be multiplied.

Co-Capt. Frederick's 6-5 frame and seniority also will be beneficial to Auburn on the boards and in experience.

Frederick's knee operation and center Bill Gregory's upset stomach have deprived the Tigers of valuable height and experience. Gregory is 6-8.

"I'm proud of the way our sophomores have battled," Eaves said, "but they need some help getting the ball."

After Baylor's 71-60 loss to Auburn, Bear Coach Bill Henderson said, "I liked the way Auburn runs, moves the ball and shoots. Once they get Frederick and Gregory back, I think they will be better than last year."

Auburn has a 10-day break for practice and examinations before trying to make it 14 straight against Florida State.—LOGUE.

ON THE PRO SCENE

HEY, SAM: YOU MADE PUNT TOO SHORT FOR STEELERS

The pro football teams were kicking from deep formations Sunday, but short punts seemed to be the order of the day, and were vital factors in at least two games.

First, Washington's Sam Baker got off a booming 12-yarder which went out of bounds at the Pittsburgh 38-yard line. Bobby Layne and his Steelers buddies—trailing 7-14 at the time—looked over there and marched to paydirt and a 14-14 tie in eight plays. The payoff was a 28-yard Layne-to-Jack McClaren pass.

The Steelers' first score—which came in the third period when the Redskins were ahead 14-0—also had come on a Layne toss. This one was a 35-yarder to end Jimmy Orr, who led the Southeastern Conference in pass receiving while playing for the University of Georgia.

Washington had Ralph Guglielmi at quarterback in place of regular Eddie LeBaron for most of the game, and the Redskins wound up with a minus 28 yards passing. Layne had 27 yards passing for the Steelers.

The Chicago Cardinals' Lamar McHan, however, won the title of getting off the shortest kick of the day, bettering Baker's poor punt by a yard. McHan's 11-yard boot set up a George Blanda field goal—a 45-yarder. Blanda's longest of the season—and the Cards went on from there to win, 30-14, all the Bears' points coming in the first half.

Baltimore coach Webb Ewbank, whose team won the Western Division title last week, saw his team slump and lose Saturday to the Los Angeles Rams, 30-18.

"There's bound to be a letdown," said the Colts coach. "Unitas (Baltimore quarterback Johnny) had a bad game coming. Those interceptions were carelessness on his part."

Unitas had three passes intercepted, but threw three TD tosses. Actually the Rams' margin of victory came in the first period when Paige Cothren (Ole Miss) tied a three-pointer from 43 yards out.

Ewbank thought his team played a better defensive game than when they beat Los Angeles in Baltimore, and said the Rams could have won the title with a few breaks.

Green Bay made the same mistakes, but more of them, to lose to San Francisco, 48-21. But Packer Billy Howton, who is president of the National Football League Players Association, was interested in getting a players' pension. He predicted one within a year.

"All the clubs are in good shape financially," he said. "In fact, this will be a record season for everybody. The players should share in this good fortune."

Jimmy Taylor, former LSU fullback, was the workhorse for the Packers, running for 137 yards on 22 tries, a 6.23 yard average. The Packers got 21 first downs to 26 for San Francisco.

And although Milt Plum's passing was the big factor in the Browns' 21-14 win over Philadelphia, fullback Jimmy Brown regained his running form. Brown, who was limited to 12 yards by the Redskins last week, ran 21 times for a total of 138 yards. The win gave the Browns at least a tie for the Eastern Division title. They must now tie or beat New York next Sunday for the crown. A Giant win would give them a tie with Cleveland.

Reventlow and Daigh Overtake Nassau Field

Broken Battery Ousts Shelby; E. D. Martin Finishes Third

NASSAU, Bahamas (AP)—Lance Reventlow and Chuck Daigh, sharing the driving chore, whipped Reventlow's powerful Corvette-powered Scarab around the 4.5-mile lap Oakes Field course at an average speed of 87.549 m.p.h. for 252 miles Sunday and won the Nassau Trophy race for sports cars.

Reventlow, son of heiress Barbara Hutton, took the sleek blue and white speedster the first 28 laps of the 56-lap grind and then relinquished the wheel to Daigh, a Los Angeles pro whose twin to the winning car was forced out at the end of the third lap with a broken shaft.

Reventlow staged a come-from-behind battle for the first 15 laps. He made a quickie pit stop at the end of the first lap to have a loose hood clamped down and dropped far behind the leaders, particularly Carroll Shelby of Dallas, Tex. Shelby, driving a 5700 CC Maserati for John Edgar of Los Angeles and Temple Buell of Denver, held the lead for the first 15 laps.

Overhauling his rivals one by one, the gangly Reventlow finally sent his $50,000 car roaring into the lead on the 16th lap as Shelby's machine chewed up a left rear tire. The change was made quickly but the car wouldn't start again due to a broken battery. It was a heart-breaking incident for the skilled Texan, who leaped out of the car in disgust as the minutes passed.

Reventlow has an average speed of 88.737 m.p.h. for the first 20 laps but dropped off slightly to 88.25 at the end of 25.

Skimming across the finish line in second place was Pedro Rodriguez Jr., elder of the two Mexico City brothers, in a Class D 2996 CC Ferrari.

Third went to E. D. Martin of Columbus, Ga., in a Class C 2933 CC Ferrari. Ed Crawford of Northfield, Ill., drove a 4500 CC Maserati, owned by Don Perkins of River Forest, Ill., to fourth place.

Reventlow's car was one minute and 50 seconds in front of Rodriguez.

Enos, Ted, Pee Wee, Vernon Last of 'Gang'

By STEVE SNIDER

NEW YORK (UPI)—Enos Slaughter... Mickey Vernon... Ted Williams... Pee Wee Reese... they're all that's left of the old gang of regulars in the major leagues when the bombs dropped at Pearl Harbor 17 years ago Sunday.

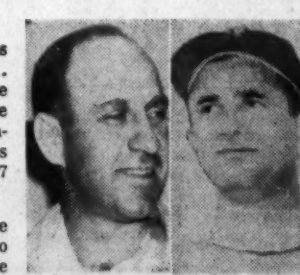

And one of that number—Pee Wee—is undecided whether to take one more twirl as an active player or switch to a coaching job with the Los Angeles Dodgers.

A whole generation of big leaguers has come and gone since Enos, Mickey, Ted and Pee Wee were part of the old pre-Pearl Harbor crowd. But these are men who always took care of themselves and the results are apparent in their longevity records.

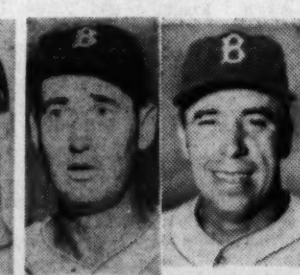

Slaughter, now a Yankee, has made it into the exclusive 20-year class. Ted will join him next Memorial Day, all with the Boston Red Sox. Vernon, now at Cleveland, and Reese both came up to stay in 1940.

Only five other players still active saw even part-time service in the majors before World War II.

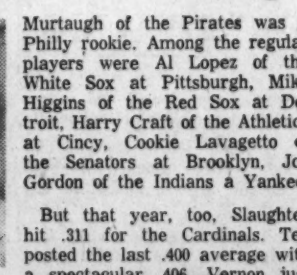

In the fall of that fateful year, Stan Musial came up to the Cardinals and astonished one and all by swatting a .426 in his 12 September games. Early Wynn of the White Sox breezed up to the Senators and posted a 3-1 record in his five late starts. Virgil Trucks of the Yankees pitched exactly two innings for the Tigers. Hank Sauer of the Giants got into nine games at Cincy and Jim Hegan of the Phils caught 16 games for Cleveland.

Only 12 others were in professional baseball at all.

Hank Bauer, now a Yankee veteran, was a rookie at Oshkosh, Wis., in 1941. Carl Furillo of the Dodgers gave his all for Reading, Pa. Andy Pafko of the Braves played his second pro season with Green Bay, Wis., and Del Rice of the Braves made it his first with Williamson, W.Va.

Earl Torgeson of the White Sox started at Wenatchee, Wash., and wound up 1941 with Seattle. Gene Woodling of Baltimore split the season between Charleston, W.Va., and Flint, Mich.

Sal Maglie of the Cardinals and Murry Dickson of the Yankees were established minor leaguers by that time but Warren Spahn of the Braves was at Evansville, Ind., for his second pro year. Marv Grissom of the Giants was a rookie at San Bernardino, Calif., and Alex Kellner of the Athletics was breaking in at Tucson, Ariz.

A long time ago? Certainly it was.

Manager Walt Alston of the Dodgers was player-manager at Springfield, Mass., and led his league with 25 homers. Bob Schefling, now Cub manager, was a Cub rookie. Fred Haney of the Braves managed the St. Louis Browns and Casey Stengel of the Yankees managed the Braves of Boston.

Bill Rigney of the Giants was breaking in at Oakland. Danny Murtaugh of the Pirates was a Philly rookie. Among the regular players were Al Lopez of the White Sox at Pittsburgh, Mike Higgins of the Red Sox at Detroit, Harry Craft of the Athletics at Cincy, Cookie Lavagetto of the Senators at Brooklyn, Joe Gordon of the Indians a Yankee.

But that year, too, Slaughter hit .311 for the Cardinals. Ted posted the last .400 average with a spectacular .406. Vernon just missed .300 with .299. And Pee-Wee was the infield spark that helped drive the Dodgers to a pennant.

down pass to Orr covered 55 yards. After six minutes of the last period the Steelers darted in eight plays from Baker's worst punt of the season to the standoff score—a 28-yard pass which McClaren grabbed sensationally in the end zone.

Baker, the National Football League's top punter, let the crucial punt slide off his foot and it traveled only 12 yards from scrimmage before going out on Pittsburgh's 38. Before the fatal punt Baker had walloped the ball 64 and 58 yards into the Steeler end zone.

Doug Haney sweeps end for eight yards and a second-quarter Rossville touchdown as Avondale's Frank James (12) makes desperate try to reach him at Avondale Saturday. Avondale tied it up at 7-7 later, however, and won the North Georgia AA crown via the penetration system.

Arizin Hot Streak Ropes in Royals

Warriors Score, 103-90, With Third Quarter Splurge

CINCINNATI (AP)—Philadelphia's Warriors wrenched free from a tie with a third-quarter splurge of 18 straight points and zoomed ahead to take a 103-90 National Basketball Assn. victory over Cincinnati's Royals Sunday.

It was Paul Arizin's hot goal-making that helped produce the big Warrior lift. He netted seven of his 11 third quarter-points in the surge that pushed the Royals out of contention.

A fourth-quarter speedup by cold-shooting Cincinnati cut the Warrior lead to 10 points and then faded out.

Philadelphia once stretched its lead to 15 points.

Arizin's 16 points in the second half helped make him the nationally televised game's top scorer with 26.

Jack Twyman's 20 points was best for the losers.

The victory broke a three-game Philadelphia losing streak and put them in contention for the Eastern Division's No. 3 spot.

The Royals had played the Warriors even through the first half.

Philadelphia had started the game with its shooting Awry and Cincinnati picked up a quick seven-point lead. But Joe Grabowski's eight straight points nixed that.

And Philadelphia staged a brief pullaway in the second quarter until Arlen Bockhorn tied it up 48-48. The half ended at 52-52.

The Royals controlled the backboard in that third quarter Warrior uprising, but couldn't sink a basket for six minutes.

Philadelphia sank 42 of 85 tries from the field and 19 of 27 free throws.

Costello Leads Nats

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP)—A hot shooting spree by Larry Costello in the final six minutes gave the Syracuse Nationals two in a row over the Boston Celtics with a 108-104 victory in their National Basketball Assn. game Sunday night. Costello scored seven points within a 50-second span that broke a 94-all tie and put the Nats ahead to stay.

Harney Nips Kroll At Dorado

Fires Final 68 For 284 Finish

DORADO BEACH, Puerto Rico (U)—Paul Harney, son of a Worcester, Mass., police sergeant and one-time Egyptian match play champion, got his putter under control Sunday and won the $30,000 Dorado Beach Invitation Golf Tournament with a 284 after a final round of 68.

Harney was four strokes off the pace after three rounds over the 7,115-yard semijungle layout where par is 36-72. He edged Ted Kroll by one stroke. Kroll had a 72.

Boll Weevils Hit Hardest At Jasper's Cotton Crops

Jasper County, in north central Georgia, was created from Baldwin County in 1807, ranking 34th in order of creation. It was originally named Randolph County for John Randolph of Virginia, but in 1812 the General Assembly became irritated with his stand on certain issues and changed the county's name to honor Sgt. William Jasper, who was killed while trying to retrieve a flag in the siege of Savannah during the Revolution. John Randolph was back in Georgia's good graces in 1828 and a new county was named in his honor.

Monticello, the county seat, was named for the Virginia estate of President Thomas Jefferson. Many of the town's settlers came from Virginia.

Gen. Andrew Jackson and his troops, en route to fight the Seminoles in Florida, spent two weeks in 1818 at Jackson Springs near Monticello. At Pulpit Rock in 1803, Lorenzo Dow, famous pioneer evangelist from Connecticut, preached the first Protestant sermon in Jasper County.

Jasper County covers 373 square miles, ranking 67th in size. It has 6,700 residents (1957 estimate), ranking 125th in population (1950 census). Monticello had 1,918 residents (1950 census). Other towns in the county are Shady Dale and Farrar. Jackson Lake is on the county's west border. Highways running through the county are Georgia 11, 16, 229, 83, 162, 221 and 142.

There were 571 farms, averaging 262 acres, in the county in 1954. About 53 per cent of the farm acreage was in woodlands and 15 per cent in harvested croplands. Jasper was once a leading cotton county but boll weevils reached the section in 1918 and did more damage than in other areas. Peanuts and peach trees were planted but no substitute could be found for King Cotton and by 1930, the county had lost half its population.

The Piedmont Game Management area of 35,000 acres is located in Jasper, Jones and Putnam counties.

3 Attributes Make Man Superior

QUESTION: In science class at school all living things are classified as animals. Are human beings actually animals? Or does God classify them differently? — D. S.

ANSWER: Biologically, man is an animal. That is to say, he does not make his own food by photosynthesis. He is thus distinguished from plant life. But he is more than an animal. He has three attributes which four-footed animals do not have: reason, conscience and will.

Animals are motivated by instinct. Their behavior patterns are instinctive, not intelligent.

Why is man different than the other animals? Because he was created in the image of God. He was created with three attributes as we have said. The first man, Adam, used all three of these attributes. First, he reasoned that his own judgment was as good as God's, and he ate of the forbidden fruit. In that act, the will of man came into play, for he could have decided either way.

New engineering triumph combines a porous, "honeycombed" ball with exclusive high-density ink . . . ends skipping problems . . . gives your writing clarity, richness and character never before possible in a ball point!

FOUNTAIN-BALL PEN

COMPARE! See the remarkable difference for yourself!

Alan Ladd
Written with old-style ball point and ordinary ink. Note the watery, "ball-point" line with no shading or character.

Alan Ladd
Written with new Fountain-Ball point and exclusive high-density ink. Note the darker, denser writing—the richness and character.

COMPARE! Won't skip on any normal surface! Amazing new Fountain-Ball writes on practically everything—including fingerprints, grease spots, butter, glossy photographs.

TWO SHAPES! Exciting new Triangular Barrel is specially designed to fit between your three writing fingers. So comfortable. Slim new Round Barrel is ever popular. Both shapes in choice of 6 colors; "fine" or "medium" point. Giant size refill gives you nearly 3 times as much writing as ordinary ball points!

HERE'S THE SECRET! Exclusive new Fountain-Ball is honeycombed!

Ordinary ball points are solid and slippery so ink merely rolls over surface, leaving a thin, watery line. But Eversharp's Fountain-Ball is honeycombed with millions of tiny ink channels that feed ink through as well as around the ball. Ink clings to paper, giving darker, denser writing—with richness and shading—like a fountain pen!

7:59 A.M. Beginning of a new day at Martin Orlando—and a new challenge for the creative engineer.

2:35 P.M. Discussion and teamwork on an advanced design problem for the real "conceptioner"

5:30 P.M. Fun in the sun—at one of more than 50 fresh-water lakes within the city limits of Orlando.

This is Martin Orlando FLORIDA

Martin Orlando, newest integrated engineering and production center of The Martin Company, is devoted entirely to missile systems research and development.

At Martin Orlando, the progressive engineer discovers a completely new environment—for work, and for living. His professional career receives new challenge—in the fields of applied research and advanced design, and on current projects such as Lacrosse, Bullpup, Missile Master and Pershing. He and his family enjoy a way of life that is a revelation in fun, good health and beauty.

Orlando is a community of fine homes, good schools, and churches, located in the heart of Florida and its fabulous Citrus Belt. Average temperature is a pleasant 71.5 degrees, bringing year-round enjoyment of outdoor sports and recreation.

If you are an advanced engineer with several years of progressive experience, you owe it to yourself and your family to find out more.

Engineering Managers of The Martin Company will be in Atlanta to conduct confidential interviews. Call Don Hunt at TR. 5-8872, or send confidential resume to John F. Wallace, Director of Employment, The Martin Company, P. O. Box 5837, Section 24A22, Orlando, Florida.

Plane Spotted Survivors and Dropped Jackets, Raft

to put every available plane in the air.

Immediately Adm. Buckmaster and his chief of staff, Capt. Eugene T. Oates, set in motion a giant rescue operation.

Lt. R. Adrian Marks had the stand-by duty that morning with VPB-23, a PBV squadron. At 12:40 p.m. the giant amphibian took off down the runway. With good luck it would reach the scene in about three hours.

Right behind him down the runway in a faster Ventura came Lt. Comdr. George Atteberry, off to relieve Lt. Gwinn, whose gas was running low.

Atteberry found Gwinn about 2:35 p.m., and the latter already had company. An unknown PBM (serial K9244), en route from Guam to Leyte, had happened on the scene about 1:45, sent three dispatches to Guam, dropped three life rafts, and continued on to Leyte. As the PBM was leaving, Atteberry was already telling Peleliu "One-fifty survivors, Lat. 11-54N Long. 133-47E."

SEEN BY SHIP

The Cecil J. Doyle (DDE 388), a trim new destroyer escort commanded by Lt. Comdr. W. Graham Clayton Jr., a Washington lawyer, was cruising along about 50 miles north of Babelthup, the largest of the Palau Islands.

As he steamed south about 2:30, Clayton saw a PBV on opposite course. He called the plane on voice radio and discovered that the pilot was Marks, his Indiana-lawyer acquaintance from Peleliu. Marks quickly told him all he knew of the survivor sightings and said he assumed the Doyle would soon get orders to reverse course.

Clayton knew it might be hours before such orders got through the constant communications jam to him. Why wait? Official orders came through an hour and a half later. It is not possible to say how many lives Clayton's stolen 90 minutes saved.

Things were now beginning to happen on Leyte, far to the north-west, and Ulithi, to the north-east.

Lt. Comdr. Albert H. Nienau, erstwhile circulation man for The Seattle Star, was in command of the Dufilio (DDE 423), en route to Ulithi on a routine anti-submarine box patrol about 150 miles east of Leyte Gulf. Upon receiving orders from Commodore Norman Gillette, acting commander, Philippine Sea Frontier, to "proceed at best possible speed and investigate" he laid on about 21 knots.

To the north of him, also on routine patrol out of Leyte, lay the Bassett (APD 73), Lt. Comdr. Harold J. Theriault, of Gloucester, Mass., commanding. Theriault's first message, received at 2:18 p.m., directed him to proceed to about 12N. 134 E., a position some 20 miles north and west of the Dufilio's orders.

As Theriault hit the course, two other vessels laid in behind him, the Register (APD 92) and the Ringness (APD 100) en route to Leyte. On orders from CINCPAC, they were turning back to join the search.

On Register, Lt. Comdr. John R. Furman welcomed a chance for some duty to break the monotony. Furman, a genial New Englander, talked over the problem with his exec, Lt. Arch R. Winter, an architect from Mobile, Ala., the ship's doctor, Lt. Louis Hamman Jr., of Baltimore, and the chaplain, Lt. (j.g.) Kenneth N. Bragg of Olympia, Wash. When the Register reached the scene she was ready, right down to a movie camera on the bridge.

The Ringness, under command of Lt. Comdr. William C. Meyer, was to have the honor of rescuing Capt. McVay and 38 enlisted men. On radar picket station north of Ulithi were the Ralph Talbot (DD 390) and the Madison (DD 425). Word reached Comdr. Winston S. Brown, USNR, in the Talbot at 4:01 p.m. (Zone 10), just an hour after he had taken station. Comdr. Brown (USNA 1929) contacted Comdr. Donald W. Todd, USN (USNA 1931), who was on the same mission in the Madison. They settled between them that on arriving at the scene Todd would take charge as senior officer.

200 MILES AWAY

Thus by late afternoon seven ships were converging on the survivors, but not one was less than 200 miles away.

Meantime, the airmen were not idle. Atteberry sent Gwinn back to Peleliu for refueling and then began an inventory of the whole area while waiting for Marks to arrive.

Marks hove into sight at 3:50 p.m. and decided that the men in groups had the best chance of staying afloat, while the singles and stragglers needed help the most, so to the latter he dropped three rafts, one shipwreck kit and some cans of dye marker. Feeling desperate action was called for, he decided to land the PBV on the water.

His problem was how to land a multi-engine plane in the 12-foot swells running from the north-west. Picking a spot where he might be of most aid to single survivors, Marks headed into the wind and put the giant plane in a power stall. It came to rest in three big bounces, with only two popped rivets and a started seam.

PLANE LEAKING

Copilot Ens. Irving D. Lefkowitz and Ens. Morgan F. Hensley immediately plugged the rivet holes with pencils and stuffed cotton in the seam, but the radio and berthing compartments were taking water slowly, and gasoline began seeping from a wing tank. She stayed afloat, however.

As overhead Atteberry began playing his role as "eyes" for the PBV, Marks taxied over to the indicated spot, and Ens. Hensley reached out of the port blister for the exhausted survivors.

The first man aboard gasped out the news that the Indianapolis had gone down. Lt. Marks and his mates were stupefied. They were sitting on one of the biggest stories of the war and dared not tell it for fear of the Japanese learning something they might not know. It wasn't until the Doyle arrived around midnight, that Lt. Comdr. Clayton carefully sent the news in secret code for a shocked Navy hierarchy to ponder.

Army Lt. Richard C. Alcorn and his PBV crew were well south of Peleliu when they got word to head for the disaster scene. Alcorn made best possible speed back to Peleliu, gassed up and loaded rafts and other survival gear. The Army PBV came onto the scene just before sunset, quickly dropped its lifesaving gear to isolated men, and prepared to set down on the water.

Before darkness descended, Alcorn's crew had pulled only one man from the water, but to him, at least, the trip was definitely worth while.

Meantime, Lt. Marks had taxied into Lt. Comdr. Lewis "Doc" Haynes' group, the largest single group of survivors; perhaps 100 were still alive.

With men all around clamoring frantically for help, Marks and his crew had the agonizing task of choosing whom to help and whom to pass by. They decided priority should go to the lone floaters. Those in the groups were outraged when Marks passed them by.

56 MEN SAVED

But Marks went on, picking up those he felt were in greatest need. They filled the plane, and then clambered onto the wings. The PBV picked up a total of 56 men.

Planes were coming over steadily now, and surface craft were closing fast from south, west and east. The Doyle was the winner. As his ship raced on, Clayton began to worry about running down men in the water.

About 9:30 p.m., despite warnings of submarines in the area, Clayton ordered one 24-inch searchlight beamed forward, with bow lookouts to watch for survivors, and the other 24-inch light pointed skyward, as a beacon of hope for those in the last extremities. Men 60 miles away saw it shining on the clouds. It gave them the last ounce of courage they needed.

Other skippers reacted differently. Theriault ordered that no lights be shown as the Bassett approached, as did Nienau on the Dufilio. The Dufilio saw the Doyle's searchlights and headed on them.

About 8,000 yards from the Doyle, the Dufilio men spotted a lone survivor. The motor whaleboat shoved off and picked up Seaman I.C. Francis N. Riney Jr. of New Orleans, who had spent four full days alone in the water without food or drink. Using life jackets taken from bodies around him, he had fashioned a sort of mattress which not only kept him afloat but safe from sharks and from drowning while dozing.

But once in the whaleboat, Riney still had another ordeal ahead. The Dufilio's sonar picked up a strong submarine contact, within 900 yards. Lt. Comdr. Nienau warned his boat away, and after consulting with his officers decided an attack was necessary despite the possible danger to men who might be in the water. It was a tough decision to make, but the Dufilio headed out from the area and laid down a pattern of hedgehog and depth charges. After 20 minutes, with negative results, the Dufilio closed in and picked up her boat. Surprisingly, Riney was able to help himself aboard the Dufilio and after a short rest, to give a fairly lucid account of his experience.

Lt. Comdr. Clayton's radar had picked up Lt. Marks' plane about 11 p.m., and headed directly for it. The Doyle pulled up a short distance from the PBV and sent her boat over to see what was up.

When the boat came back with a load of survivors, one of them made his way to the bridge and announced:

"This is all that is left of the Indianapolis. We have been in the water four days." It was Dr. Haynes.

Clayton and the men around him were stunned. When Clayton recovered his voice he blurted out that Capt. Charles McVay was married to his cousin.

Dr. Haynes said he had glimpsed McVay soon after the vessel went down but had not seen him since.

Clayton immediately summoned the communications officer, Lt. James A. Fite Jr., and dictated the following message for Vice Adm. Murray, commander, Marianas.

"We are picking up survivors of USS Indianapolis, torpedoed and sunk Sunday night. Urgently request surface and air assistance."

It was the first definite word to get through, and a shocker it was.

Rescue operations when they came were swift and efficient, but only for 316 of the more than 800 members of the Indianapolis crew who had survived the torpedoing. In Chapter X of Richard Newcomb's epic narrative, "Abandon Ship" in tomorrow's Constitution, he tells of the end of the men's watery ordeal.

...and loving hands that fill them. It's songs, too. It's Christmas trees and jingle bells and making candles with the family.

That's Christmas!

And down at this big store, we hope, a day at Rich's is Christmas to you, too!

RICH'S

A SOUTHERN INSTITUTION SINCE 1867.

CHRISTMAS began early for members of the Auxiliary of St. Joseph's Infirmary who entertained at their annual party Saturday evening in the Members' Room of the Atlanta Art Assn. Here Mrs. Alton Irby Jr., who served as party chairman, poses against one of the Christmas trees used as decorations with Mrs. W. Ellis Gay, the auxiliary president, and Dr. and Mrs. J. W. Veatch Jr. Dr. Veatch is chief of the medical staff of St. Joseph's.

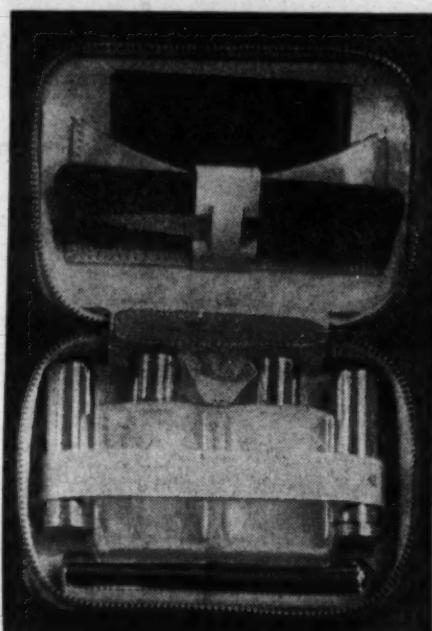

GUESTS present included Dr. Marion T. Benson, who is a member of St. Joseph's staff, and Mrs. Benson. A feature of the party, a cocktail buffet, was the display of "Christmas Trees Around the World" decorated annually by members of the Cherokee Garden Club at the Art Association.

ENJOYING the buffet are Dr. Tully Blalock, right, who is a member of St. Joseph's staff, Mrs. Blalock, second from left, and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Corrigan. Mrs. Vernon Skiles Jr. was co-chairman of the affair with Mrs. Irby. Mrs. Lester Rumble Jr. is president-elect of the auxiliary and will take office in May. Dr. Sterling Claiborne will succeed Dr. Veatch as chief of the medical staff at the hospital.

Say Merry Christmas in Style With This Bright Array of Gifts

By RAYMONDE ALEXANDER

Atlanta Constitution Fashion Editor
If you find yourself dangleing like a Christmas ball over this seasonal gift dilemma, you needn't do anything rash.

All you really need is help—the kind that pulls out a few gifts from the maze that greets you in shopping the stores. It is the kind of help that pulls back the forest and lets you see the trees.

Well, here are just a few that were found before the counters got so loaded. Maybe you've seen them. Then, again maybe you haven't. It's awfully easy to overlook just what you're looking for when there's so much to choose from. Any one of them would say "Merry Christmas" in the grand manner because most of them were chosen for distinctiveness rather than for price.

MUSICAL TREE

A gift she'll treasure from one Christmas to the next as her favorite decoration is the musical Christmas tree. It's about 10 inches tall, made of snow-capped greenery, and circled with bright beads. A silver star is placed right at its tip-top and the base is gold inlaid with jewels. Wind it up and it turns around and around to the tune of "Silent Night."

There's also a lovely musical heart that is designed to store jewels or make-up in the prettiest fashion.

A clever gift for her handbag is actually a collection of little things that match. There is a lipstick case, a pill box, a compact and a comb all done in pastel colors with jewel designs. The comb opens and closes like an old-fashioned straight razor and its slimmness takes very little carrying space.

DESK AT HOME

For her desk at home there's a set fashioned of gold metal and decorated festively with beads and scrolls. The set includes a ballpoint pen and note taker, a cigaret box, a silent butler, and a cigaret lighter. The lighter is musical and plays "Smoke Gets in Your Eyes."

While you're giving sets, don't forget there's nothing as pleasing to the fastidious woman as a beautiful dresser set. One of the loveliest is handmade by an Austrian couple and it features white satin trimmed with rosebuds in blue or pink.

For the traveler on your list, remember that compactness and packability are most wanted in a gift. Try giving the leather kit containing mirror, comb, nail file, containers for lipstick, perfume, lotion, cologne, and tooth brush. A tiny funnel is included to make pouring the liquids easier.

IMPORTANT GIFT

A jewel of importance is an important gift and one she'll treasure is a big stone with smaller stone dangles on a gold chain. The pin comes off the chain and may be pinned to your dress.

Nonsensical but sensible are the gifts of a tiny hand mirror with jewel-encrusted lipstick for her handbag and a lace garter. The garter comes with jewel or mink ornament and can be hilarious for a Christmas party.

If you have a talker who exceeds her three-minute telephone limit, put the idea across that it's time to hang up with a gold hourglass. It is lined on each end with either blue or brown and has matching colored sand.

For shopping information, call JA. 2-5050, Ext. 394, or send a self-addressed post card to the Women's Department, The Atlanta Constitution.

Lacy Stockings Add Elegance To Hosiery

Nylon hosiery with elegant airs is right in step with the prevailing mood of elegance in holiday fashions. For the extra-glamorous gift that every woman loves, there are nylon lace stockings in exquisitely dainty patterns and enchanting colors, as well as off-black—perfect to wear for late-day festivities.

Other lacy effects in sheer hose of new nylon give town ensembles a dressed-up air, and make pretty legs look even prettier.

Celestine Sibley A Lovely Day Well Spent

Muv came up from Florida to see me through my trip to the hospital and we had but one day to spare. The question was whether to use that day packing a suitcase and going to the beauty parlor to get a hospital hair-do—or whether to spend it getting the cabin at Holly Creek secure for the cold weather.

"You enjoy a convalescence more if you feel like you look pretty well," Muv admitted, looking at the way the sun turned a few rag-tag remnants of leaves on the red oak tree to a deep, rich garnet.

"Yes," I said, resting my eyes on the clean bare branches of my neighbor's sycamore tree. "When you're going to the hospital you should splurge and get yourself a new and becoming hair-do. When the children were born I always went to the beauty parlor practically on the way to the hospital."

"Yes, ma'am," said my son. "And I expect you should rest."

That being agreed upon we all grabbed our coats and headed for Holly Creek.

The best time to go to Holly Creek, I've found, is when you know full well that you should be somewhere else. That adds a flavor of truancy to the whole expedition and keeps you busy enjoying every moment of the trip in what is probably a very defensive fashion. You look at a clump of chrysanthemums in a dooryard and cry, "Look! The frost missed them!" and feel a great rush of self-congratulation. If I had been stuck off under a dryer, you say, I'd never have known that particular little pleasurable bit about the chrysanthemums.

And so it goes all day long.

The winter landscape, bare and bright and clean looking, might be an old lithograph. Everything stands out sharp and clear, every winter-frowsy old mule in a pasture, every sagging barn door, every zigzag fence and willow tree. The shape of the earth is there to see, unconfused by summer's lush green foliage or autumn's brilliant, distracting colors.

The voice of the creek sounds louder and more welcoming, the fireplace exerts itself to give you a quick and welcoming fire, even the wood range says its glad you came by drawing sweet and quick, perking the coffee in record time.

"Of course, we HAD to come," I said, sitting on the front step in the sun, drinking my coffee and watching Muv and her grandson shoot at a target propped against the hill.

"Of course," they agreed, virtuously.

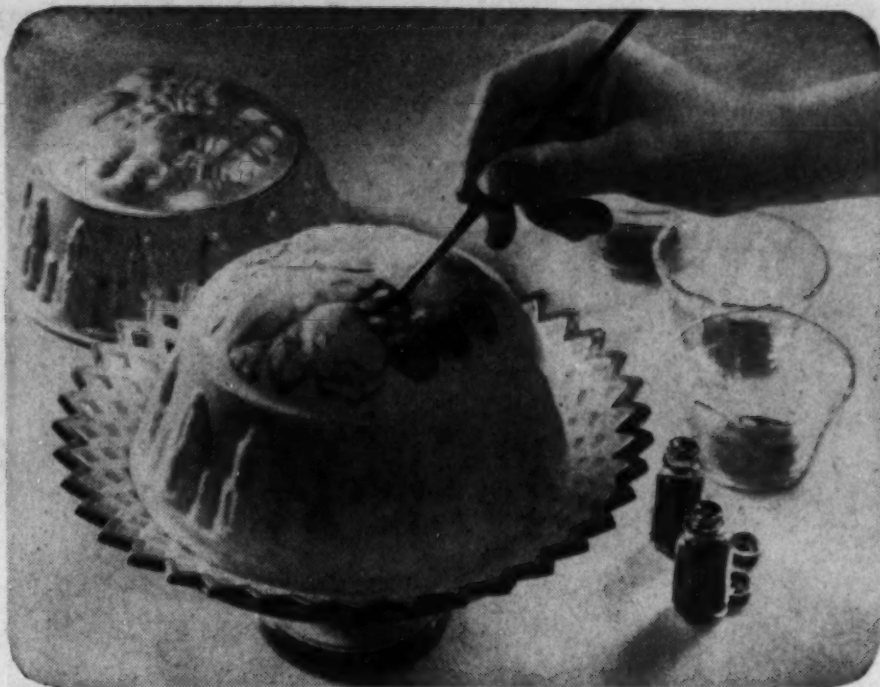

"There was a little water in the drip pan under the ice box," I pointed out logically. "If we hadn't come a mouse might have gotten in there and drowned and that would have been a terrible thing to come back to in a few weeks."

"Wouldn't it?" said Muv, taking aim at a tin can.

"And besides, there are the mattresses," I went on. "That chipmunk up under the eaves will take all the cotton out of every single mattress and pack it around in the walls and ceiling if we don't stow the mattresses away."

"No two ways about it," said Muv, "you had to come."

I went inside to cook the hamburgers for our lunch and I smiled contentedly to myself. My hair will be a mess, all sprangly and wild and smelling of wood smoke when I put on my new pink bed jacket and sit up in the hospital, I thought. But what a lovely day to have stored in my head to think about when the boredom of being house-bound and inactive sets in!

Open House To Fete Couple on Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Murphy, who will have been married 50 years on Saturday, Dec. 27, will be honor guests at an open house celebrating the anniversary on that date.

Hosts for the party, which will be held at the Murphy home at 799 Shadowridge Dr., SE, will be the couple's sons and daughters, their wives and husbands. They include Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Murphy, Mr. and Mrs. E. M.

Murphy, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas F. Murphy, Mr. and Mrs. J. Calvin Murphy, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Barfield, all of Atlanta, and Mr. and Mrs. Lynn Harrington of Norwich, N.Y.

Mr. Murphy and the former

Edith Mary Johnson of Gainesville were married in 1908 and have lived in Atlanta for the past 45 years. In addition to their four sons and two daughters, they have nine grandchildren. Before his retirement, Mr. Murphy was assistant city attorney.

The calling hours are from 3 to 6 o'clock.

Bowers Baby

Mr. and Mrs. L. F. Bowers Jr. announce the birth of a son, Louie Jackson, on Nov. 15 at Crawford Long Hospital.

This Eggnog Is a Masterpiece In Colorful Holiday Setting

By VIRGINIA DYSARD KEZIAH
Atlanta Constitution Food Editor

An artist would pick up his brush and make a masterpiece in colors of this eggnog Bavarian. The purple of the grapes would blend with the red of the strawberries and raspberries, and green leaves covering the background would outline and harmonize with the fruit.

For this eggnog Bavarian of cool and smooth texture, commercially bottled eggnog sold for holiday beverages is used. The rich milk and egg combination provides a ready-made custard base. Whipped cream is added for richness and additional smoothness of texture.

The dessert may be unmolded and trimmed an hour or so before serving; but immediately after the color trim is applied, return the gelatin dessert on its serving platter to the refrigerator. Keep chilled until dessert time.

MOLDED EGGNOG

- 2 envelopes unflavored gelatin
 - 1/4 cup sugar
 - 1 quart bottled nonalcoholic eggnog
 - 1/4 tsp. nutmeg, optional
 - 4 tps. rum flavoring, optional
 - 1 cup heavy cream, whipped
- Combine gelatin and sugar in top of double boiler. Stir in 1 cup of the cold eggnog. Place over boiling water and stir until gelatin and sugar are dissolved. Remove from heat; add remaining eggnog. If additional flavoring is desired, add nutmeg and flavoring. Chill until mixture mounds slightly when dropped from a spoon. Fold in whipped cream. Turn into a 6-cup mold with fruit design; chill until firm. Unmold. Put few drops desired food coloring in small cups; mix with small amount water. Use small paint brush to outline fruit design on mold. Makes 10 servings.

STEAMED CRANBERRY PUDDING

(Low-Calorie)
1/2 cup butter
2 tbsps. Sucaryl solution

1 cup skim milk
3 cups sifted flour
2 tps. baking powder
1/4 tsp. salt
2 eggs, well beaten
2 cups cranberries

Cream butter and Sucaryl together; gradually add milk, then dry ingredients, blended together. Stir in eggs. Fold in cranberries. Pour into a buttered 1-quart mold. Cover with aluminum foil and steam for 1 1/2 hours.

Makes 15 servings.

These Belles Prefer Smartness to Frills

By BETTY CARROLLTON

A delightful duo of Southern belles had rather wear officers' bars and a trim uniform than don the frilliest gown from Scarlett O'Hara's wardrobe.

Capt. Donrue Weaver, a shapely Florida lass who took a fling in the world of journalism before turning to a service career, and Lt. Betty J. Tallant, a Vicksburg, Miss. beauty who grew up in a family atmosphere of military discipline, have been hailed as two of the "most typical" officers in the women Marines. They recently joined forces at 6th Marine Reserve and Recruitment District headquarters in Atlanta to put their knowledge in action.

TOP STUDENT

For Betty, top student of the 12th Marine Corps Woman Officer Indoctrination Class of 1958 at Quantico, Va., the temporary assignment here marks her first job as an officer. She became the assistant to Capt. Weaver, who made a return trip to Atlanta for duty, as district Woman Marine Officer Selection Officer. The two are touring colleges in the Southeast, where they talk to women students on the Corps' woman officer indoctrination course.

The duo's visit to the Tennessee Polytechnic Institute, Cookeville, Tenn., was "more fun than work," for Betty, who is a graduate of the college with a BS degree in business management.

"I saw several students whom I knew," she recalled, "and seeing me in uniform caused them to look twice. One boy went past the desk three times before deciding it was really ME. Then he came over to say hello."

REAL VETERAN

The slim, shapely lieutenant is a real veteran of military service: She served with the WAC's from August, 1951, to August, 1954 at Ft. Lee and Ft. Belvoir, Va. When she received her discharge, Betty held the rank of staff sergeant. Betty's father has over 22 years in the Army, and presently holds the rank of lieutenant colonel in the Army Reserve. Her two brothers are also Army vets. When she discovered she preferred a military career to any of the promising civilian jobs, Betty investigated all branches of the service before she enlisted.

"After that," she said with pride, "I decided to join the best outfit."

She joined the Marines last June with the blessings of her family, and her dad and brothers were the first to congratulate her when she graduated with top honors of her class.

Betty declared the Marine Corps is "quite different" from the WAC's, and a real esprit de corps underlines day-to-day living in a manner "you won't find in any other branch of the service."

"The high standards of the Corps are a challenge to you in every job," she continued. "The traditions spark you with the desire to do just a little better than you think you can."

As a former member of the enlisted ranks, Lt. Tallant "can see both sides of the fence." As an officer, she finds she has "more privileges than enlisted personnel, but along with the privileges comes more responsibilities. One more or less balances the other."

"But let's face it," she added with a merry laugh, "I'd rather be an officer!"

Miss Virginia Roland Wed To John Medlin

At an evening ceremony solemnized on Friday at the Riverside Baptist Church in Miami, Virginia Maurice Roland, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard A. Roland of Miami, was married to John Ronald Medlin, son of Mr. and Mrs. John E. Medlin of Decatur.

A reception followed in the church lounge.

The Rev. Quinn Pugh, pastor of the Jackson Hill Baptist Church of Atlanta, was the officiant.

Mr. Roland gave his daughter in marriage and she was attended by her sister, Patty Lee, as maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Judy Grenier and Sandra Hunter of Miami.

Mr. Medlin chose his father as his best man, and for his groomsmen he selected Fred Gordon and Harvey Pearson of Atlanta. The bride's uncle, Dr. Billy Rentz and John Grenier of Miami, ushered.

The bride's cousins, Robin Rentz and Karen Burley of Miami, were the small flower girls.

The bride's gown of white tulle over satin featured a bodice of Chantilly lace. Her fingertip veil was attached to a pearl crown, and she carried a bouquet of white orchids and valley lilies.

After a wedding trip to the Florida Keys, Mr. Medlin and his bride will reside in Atlanta where he is associated with Air Control Co.

Miss Hensley Named BPW District Officer

Miss Sarah Hensley of Decatur has been elected district chairman of the Business and Professional Women's Clubs.

Other district officers chosen at a recent meeting are Miss Nanelle Smith of Gainesville, vice chairman; Miss Fannie Armstrong of the Tri-City Club, treasurer; Mrs. Euline Mills of Gainesville, member of the state nominating committee, and Mrs. Odessa Tanner of Lawrenceville, alternate to the nominating committee.

Miss Turner, Mr. Spradley To Be Wed

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Turner of Tifton announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Bonnie Turner, to Harold Spradley, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Spradley of Lenox.

Miss Turner attended Tift County schools. Her fiancé, who is now residing in Florida, attended school in Cook County.

GEORGIA NEWS ROUNDUP

Quarry Blast Wrecks 2 Houses at Ellerslie

An ear-splitting dynamite explosion wrecked two homes in Ellerslie and damaged at least a dozen others, sending two elderly women to the medical center in Columbus for treatment of shock.

No serious injuries were reported in the colossal blast Saturday afternoon which knocked out windows, smashed china and twisted doors over a wide area. A 19-week-old baby in the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Simmons was knocked out of bed by the concussion, but the child, little Carol Simmons, was unhurt.

The explosion occurred at 3:45 p.m. at a rock quarry in the Gordydale subdivision of this Harris County community. Thomas J. Adams, 58, who owns the land on which the quarry is situated, said a small dynamite shed apparently caught fire and touched off a quantity of high explosive inside.

Cause of the accident was not immediately determined. The two dwellings nearest the scene of the blast—both owned by Adams—were badly wrecked on the inside.

Adams said he returned to his house and found his wife, Mrs. Essie Mae Adams, 57, and her mother, Mrs. Callie Mullis, 83, standing in the yard in a state of shock. Both women were rushed to the medical center for emergency treatment. They were released about two hours later.

Mrs. Mullis had suffered a small laceration of the scalp, according to hospital attendants.

The second Adams house was unoccupied at the time of the explosion. It is the residence of Fred Adams, the elder man's son, who was reported to be in another city.

Interiors of the two residences were in shambles. Plaster had been knocked off the walls, windows blown out, furniture splintered and china broken. The concussion had pulled walls back and piled debris several inches thick on the floors.

Frightened Gordydale citizens described the blast as similar to a high-velocity artillery shell. Homes over a wide radius were damaged in varying degrees.

Santa Claus Gains

The town of Santa Claus, Georgia's smallest incorporated city, has undergone a population boom. The population has doubled from two persons to four. Some 5,800 tickets to the Georgia Center Christmas Festival in Athens have been distributed. The Christmas Festival will be held Dec. 11-23.

Johnnie D. Long, 40, of Waycross, is being held in Meridian, Miss., for investigation in the kidnapping of a retired Tuscaloosa, Ala., minister. The minister said he was forced to drive to Meridian where he was bound with a belt and tie and was robbed of $40 to $50. Long is scheduled to appear before a U.S. commissioner Monday, when the FBI will file formal charges against him.

A fully-automatic communications network—part of the global Air Force Communications Complex (AIRCOC)—will go into operation this week at Robins Air Force Base. Ceremonies Thursday will open at Robins the last of five automatic switching centers located at strategic bases in the United States.

City's Empty Stocking Drive Appears a Record Breaker

At a late hour Sunday night it appeared the 1958 Empty Stocking Drive was headed toward a record-shattering success.

Jubilant Jaycee leaders at Empty Stocking headquarters in the Bank of Georgia said the final tally would not be available for another week or more. Funds were raised through the sale of a special edition of The Atlanta Journal-Constitution.

They pointed out, however, that returns thus far indicated citizens of Atlanta are responding with a generosity unmatched in previous years.

WILL ENABLE

Atlanta Jaycee President Doug Cook said, "This expression of kindness will enable the 1958 Empty Stocking Fund to serve a greater number of children than ever before. We are extremely grateful for Atlanta's recognition for the fact that we increased the number of children to be served this year and therefore needed a higher amount than at any time in the past to reach our goal.

"On behalf of every Jaycee and Atlanta Newspapers Inc., we say, 'Thank you!'"

Jaycees were shooting at enough money to provide for 10,000 needy Atlanta youngsters.

MAIL DONATIONS

Those missed by solicitors when they called Sunday can contribute to the fund by mailing donations to Empty Stockings, P.O. Box 1208, Atlanta 1, Ga. Donations may also be made at the Empty Stocking Store, Peachtree at Baker.

Fulton National Bank begins auditing the collection Monday.

Drive Chairman was Jim Leak.

Cherokee DAR Plans Anniversary Party

The Cherokee Chapter of DAR is 10 years old this month and in celebration of the anniversary, the chapter members will entertain at a special birthday and Christmas brunch on Wednesday at 11 o'clock at the Piedmont Driving Club.

Mrs. L. Ransom Burt, who now makes her home in Coral Gables, Fla., called the meeting to organize the chapter at the Capital City Country Club in December, 1948, and served as its first regent. There were 32 charter members.

Among the charter members who have left Atlanta for residence and are returning for the party are Mrs. Burt, Mrs.

John S. Candler of Daytona Beach and Mrs. James Crouse of Macon.

Mrs. Shelley Davis is in charge of a novel program for the event, with Mrs. John Montgomery as her assistant.

Charter officers who are still active in the chapter are Mrs. Hinton Blackshear, Mrs. Claude Fitts and Mrs. J. C. Holton, each of whom has served as regent; Mrs. M. Lee Jones, Mrs. E. W. Smith, Mrs. H. A. Kane, Mrs. William A. Bugg and Mrs. James Therrell.

HOUSEWIFE REPORTS:

Full Housepower, Electric Range Is Sound Reasoning

There are many reasons a housewife prefers one range over another! This is the story of a typical housewife, Mrs. Alton J. Tribble, the wife of an automobile salesman and the mother of a 6-month-old boy. These are her reasons for choosing a modern electric range, and at the same time having her home supplied with adequate wiring... commonly referred to as FULL HOUSEPOWER!

"My goodness, my new electric range cooks so clean, I feel perfectly at ease wearing a meal. For that matter, my entire kitchen is so much easier to keep clean as a result of this wonderfully modern appliance," stated the young housewife.

Ever since the Tribbles moved into their new home at 1089 Vista Trail, N.E., they were bothered with blown fuses. This problem, a disgustingly familiar one to many Atlanta area homeowners, continued to hamper cooking results, even after the new range was installed. Almost at the point of no return, Mrs. Tribble called on the Residential Sales department of the Georgia Power Company for a possible solution.

MODERN COOKING—It's easy to get excellent cooking results with the modern combination of Full Housepower and a brand-new electric range. "It's wonderful," exclaims Mrs. Alton J. Tribble, pictured with Ralph Chapman, a residential sales engineer for the Georgia Power Co. It's simple to have Full Housepower installed in your home. Just call one of the well-qualified electrical contractors listed at the left for a free estimate.

Ralph Chapman, a very competent residential sales engineer, went to their home to analyze the wiring capacity, only to discover an inadequate 30-ampere service, which was far too small for their modern needs. "To insure peak performance," explained Mr. Chapman, "of not only your new electric range, but also all of your modern electrical conveniences, have your service capacity increased, and have it done by a reliable electrical contractor who is cooperating in this Full Housepower campaign." He was referring, of course, to the electrical contractors listed in the ad at the left.

In a very short time, and without any disturbance to their daily routine, the Tribbles had 100-ampere service, which was the amount recommended by Mr. Chapman, installed in their home. It's a different story at the Tribble home, now. Instead of calling on her husband to replace another blown fuse, she only calls him to sit down to another delicious meal, prepared to please the taste of a gourmet on her modern, new electric range.

Says a now very happy Mrs. Tribble, "There's certainly no guesswork involved in cooking on this range. The controlled heat stays where you set it, without variation. Why, with a nice oven like this, I don't have a bit of trouble getting good baking results. It does practically all the work for me." Another very good reason the Tribbles now enjoy living better electrically is the fact that they understand completely the meaning of Full Housepower. As explained to them by Mr. Chapman, it's simply having adequate wiring in your home to amply supply the needs of modern, electrical conveniences.

Compare Your Auto Policy On Coverage

It's a simple fact . . . Money can be saved on annual renewal costs of automobile insurance.

As recently reported by L. G. Massey and Josh D. Barrow, leading State Farm agents in Georgia and among the nation's tops, "Eight out of 10 average drivers can qualify for these big savings."

The joint statement further explained, "When someone takes their first State Farm coverage, a membership fee is paid. This covers the initial costs, which many companies charge you again and again. With State Farm, you never pay a fee on this coverage after the first time. Once a member, you too may enjoy big insurance savings and at the same time a positive feeling of security."

The full effectiveness of State Farm policies is made complete by the efficient, competent and courteous service rendered by these agents. With a combined total of over 32 years in the insurance business, agents L. G. Massey and Josh D. Barrow now serve more than 9,000 State Farm policyholders in this area.

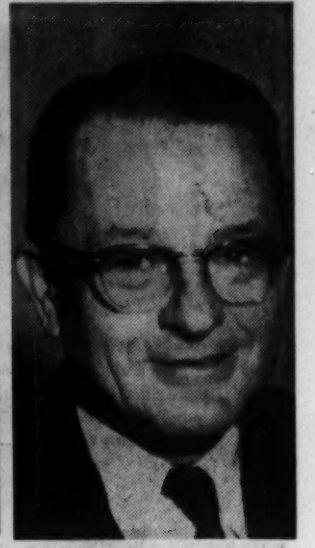

When an emergency arises, customers always get prompt personal attention, which is all-important. The large percentage of renewals in itself, testifies satisfaction. It's no wonder that the Bloomington, Ill., firm handles more automobile insurance than any other company in the nation.

This distinction is the result of the bare facts of big savings and good service.

Even though State Farm agents L. G. Massey and Josh D. Barrow specialize in auto insurance, they can also competently handle your complete insurance program. State Farm Fire and Cas-

Birds Flock to Pennington's New 'Wild Birds' Delight'

'PSB' Attracts Wild Birds Year Around

Now, bird lovers can attract song birds to their yards the year around... with a new balanced bird food diet, perfected after two years of research throughout the Southeast... and containing all the seeds wild birds would eat the year around, if they could find them!

Bearing the name PENNINGTON WILD BIRDS DELIGHT, it is produced by Pennington Grain & Seed, Inc., of Madison, Ga., makers of the famous Pennington Green year-round hormone-treated lawn seed.

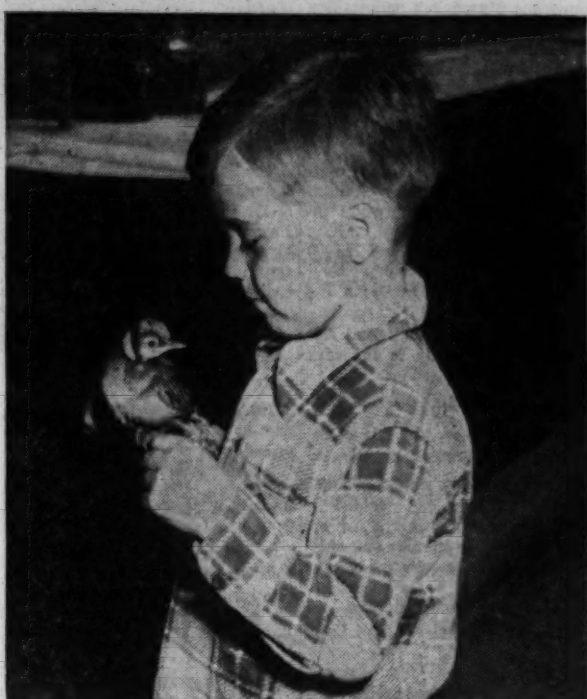

The story behind the development of Wild Birds Delight is an interesting one. For two years, Pennington's researchers studied the feeding habits of wild birds at bird sanctuaries in the Southeast, as well as in Pennington's own farm, a tract of approximately one thousand acres in the heart of the Southland.

From this four-season research was ascertained the kinds of seeds wild birds eat—if they could get them—such as sunflower seeds, millets, sorghums, milos, cracked corn, wheat clover seed, bird rape, hagaris, red and white proso, to name only a few.

Pennington combined these natural favorite seeds in greater percentages into a special balanced formula no other bird food diet possesses. The result: Pennington Wild Birds Delight with PSB (Pennington Special Blend), formulated to attract and hold beautiful birds in your yard and area.

After gathering only the most perfect seed, Pennington then machine-screens, triple-air washes and polishes every single seed for extra cleanliness and purity. This is another important reason why Pennington Wild Birds Delight is the finest quality bird food.

The pleasure of beautiful songbirds flocking to your yard daily is truly a rewarding experience.

BIRDS REALLY GO FOR—Pennington's new "Wild Birds Delight," as well illustrated in the above photo. The point that makes the difference is PSB (Pennington's Secret Blend), and you'll see the evidence when birds keep coming back for more visits to your yard. Pennington's Wild Birds Delight is now available at all seed stores, hardware stores, pet and lawn and garden shops. Ask for it today!

and the South is fortunate in having many colorful birds in its environs. Some of these are red cardinals, blue jays, nuthatches, chickadees, robins, blackbirds, woodpeckers, mocking birds, blue birds and brown thrushes. "To attract these birds to your yard in droves the year around," Brooks Pennington Jr., president of the firm, advises, "just keep plenty of Pennington Wild Bird Delight in your bird planter high off the ground. Birds will fly down to peck the seed off the ground—but much of it is lost when sprinkled directly on the ground."

Incidentally, the Department of Agriculture and the Fish and Wildlife Service have called attention to the great value of birds around property. Birds have actually stopped insect plagues, and in recent years farmers and gardeners have given considerable thought to means of attracting more birds to their grounds. In addition, the Audubon Society carries on a continuing campaign for the preservation of bird life.

Pennington Wild Birds Delight with PSB is sold at seed, hardware, nursery stores and pet shops everywhere. Look for Pennington Wild Birds Delight in the yellow sack with the Red Cardinal on it, now in a new thrifty five-pound size to save you time and money!

WHERE EFFICIENCY IS A KEYWORD—Here you see the attractive building of Bins & Equipment Co., Inc., at 1918 Buford Hwy., NE. As warehouse distributors for Burroughs Steel Shelving, Interior Steel Lockers, Sturdy-Bilt heavy duty Storage Racks, and Burroughs Parts Bins, this widely known firm maintains ample stocks of storage equipment right here in Atlanta, so that they can supply any need with utmost speed. Mr. Sam Neuberger, head of the firm, says, "Our engineering and estimating facilities are made available to architects and others interested in making the best possible use of limited floor space."

For Higher Efficiency, Get 'Planned Storage' by Bins & Equip.

Planning Help Rendered by Skilled Persons year by year with Southern Industry because they stay in a better position to give worthy, helpful service.

"Perhaps you have a brand-new stockroom requiring a complete new bin system or maybe you want your present one made more efficient," said H. M. "Hamp" McGee, sales manager and vice president. "In any case, we can show you many economies that will mean much to your business because of our knowledge of the equipment, the product to be stored and the space in which it is to be accomplished."

"We've always tried to give the customer who wants a 40c piece of shelving the same fast and conscientious service as we give the industrialist who wants a complete layout for a huge stockroom," said Sam Neuberger. "It has paid dividends," he added, "for hundreds have been quick to recommend us." A litter or phone call from any town in Georgia and adjoining states brings a skilled sales engineer who will make estimates and recommendations without obligation.

The firm's engineering and estimating facilities are offered to architects and any others desiring assistance. Mr. McGee told of many instances where the firm has helped to bring order out of chaos, thereby making inventory control simple, customer service far superior and the whole operation run smoother. Installation engineers correctly and completely install every system.

Burroughs equipment, when installed and planned by Bins & Equipment Co., is attractive, rugged and highly flexible. You save valuable time when arranging shelves, dividers and trays. Shelves are adjustable without bolting and can be moved even when loaded. They speed up counter service and end forever the frustration that comes with hunting all over for parts. Mr. Neuberger says the firm's equipment can give auto dealers, "At this time of the year when new models go on display, revision of the parts department is almost imperative," he said. "The Burroughs Flexi-Bin, especially designed for auto dealers, makes this a simple matter," he explained.

Interior Steel Lockers, also distributed from Bins & Equipment Company's big warehouse on the Buford Highway, are found in the locker rooms, linen rooms and pantries of the foremost institutions in the South, including golf courses, schools and hospitals.

If your business has expanded and you need additional storage facilities, temporary or permanent, or when you need steel lockers for any purpose, Bins & Equipment can best make recommendations for efficiency that brings satisfaction. Visitors are always welcome at 1918 Buford Highway, NE, or you can write for an estimate without obligation. The telephone number is TR. 2-3576.

British Pound Healthy, Say European Partners

Gold and Dollar Reserve Levels Still Thin, but Not Inadequate

PARIS (AP)—Great Britain's European economic partners today concluded that the pound sterling is in healthy shape and likely to remain so.

The Organization for European Economic Cooperation (OEEC) annual report on the United Kingdom said Britain's gold and dollar reserves are now at a far more satisfactory level than prior to the confidence crisis of September, 1957.

The report said the reserves remain inadequate for long term stability but "there is now no reason to suppose that some moderate fall would lead to new speculation against the pound."

18 MONTHS
The report covered the 18 months up to mid-1958. Britain's economy is in a moderate downturn and this seems likely to continue for the near future but there is no immediate reason to expect a sharp decline, the report said.

"The task of United Kingdom economic policy is to bring about a renewed expansion of output without undermining the recent improvements in respect of price stability and the external balance."

UPON EVERYONE
The report added, should allow the government to impress upon everyone the need for moderating cost increases."

The main problem, the experts found, was for the government to counter deflationary influences while still maintaining the strength of the pound.

'60 Hopefuls Disappoint Mrs. FDR
NEW YORK (AP)—Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt said Sunday none of the potential candidates for the 1960 presidential nomination have yet shown the spark of greatness that will be needed in the next president.

She made it plain that she is not in the corner of Sen. John F. Kennedy (D-Mass.).

Appearing on the ABC telecast, college news conference, the wife of the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt said the next president will have to be a man of great courage.

SUPERLATIVE TOUCH
"I haven't yet decided who has that superlative touch," she said. Asked if she thought Adlai Stevenson, twice defeated for the presidency, would again be given the Democratic nomination, Mrs. Roosevelt said:

"There is a tradition that someone nominated twice and defeated both times never has won an election. This probably means he (Stevenson) will not be given the mandate again."

ABOUT CHANCES
Asked about chances that Sen. Kennedy would get the Democratic nomination, and whether she would support his candidacy, she said:

"I would do all I could to nominate someone I felt would not have some of the difficulties I think Sen. Kennedy would have."

High Unemployment Seen Despite Business Uptrend

NEW YORK—Next year the nation's economy will be in the unusual position of a higher general business trend and continued large unemployment. Business now is better, but unemployment is high. Reason: Companies are increasing the working hours of employees rather than add additional hands. And though the business betterment may continue, it is likely the number of new hands hired will not offset the gain in the labor force. Don't overlook the increased use of more efficient automatic machines.

The word is heard almost everywhere that consumer durable goods sales volume next year will advance about 10 per cent with a dollar increase of at least $3,500,000,000 over 1958. But commercial bankers think the gain will be mostly in prices rather than number of units.

3 Dips, Little Harm
The nation has gone through three recessions in the 12-year postwar period without the economy getting into trouble of any consequence. Corporate earnings and dividends didn't suffer much, especially in the 1957-58 recession, which was the most severe of the three. Business executives gained great knowledge from these experiences. They learned to reduce costs substantially despite the continued rise in wage rates. It's an indicator of profit prospects when the economy is back on solid ground.

Two things are certain at this time: (1) The business recovery will continue, but at a somewhat slower rate than in recent months, and (2) The Federal Reserve Board stands ready to use all its monetary powers to prevent a new inflationary outbreak.

What a Bill!
Retailers cook up unusual methods to stimulate business. Received a letter from one that looked like a bill. Opened it, found these typed words: "You don't owe us a nickel. Haven't for many months. Can't we do something about this?"

Union Helps Out
Unions don't always fight management. Take the case of the fur workers union. It joined management in a three-year $900,000 program to revive female interest in buying furs. Mink, sable and ermine are popular with those who can afford them. But the less expensive furs show a drop in sales volume. The labor leaders urged the industry to get action. Now even the fur trade association is in the act. Did you know the fur workers union is part of the Fur and Leather Department of the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen's Union?

De Gaulle Defers Step On Algeria

Time 'Not Ripe'; Dims Cease-Fire
By HENRY TANNER
(Copyright, 1958, The New York Times Co.)
ALGIERS—Gen. Charles de Gaulle declared here Saturday night that the time is not yet ripe for a political solution of the Algerian problem.

His statement was in sharp conflict with the wishes of ultra-conservative Europeans who have been pressing him for proclamation of immediate and total integration of Algeria and France.

It appeared also to exclude the possibility of a new French attempt to start cease-fire negotiations with nationalist Algerian rebel leaders.

COMMAND CHANGES
In a parallel development, sources close to the Premier said Sunday night that an announcement of far-reaching changes in the French high command in Algeria will be made within the next few days in Paris.

These changes will include a gradual transition from the military to a civilian regime, these sources said.

Generals who since last spring have had functions also of civilian prefects or administrators will be replaced by civilians in most parts of Algeria, informants said. The military, however, are expected to maintain their civil powers in areas where heavy fighting continues.

"Our problem is above all a human problem—to give each Algerian his liberty, well-being and his dignity," Gen. De Gaulle declared.

Once this is done, he added, "the personality of Algeria and the nature of the things that tie her to France will reveal themselves more clearly (and) the so-called political solution will appear."

The general made his statement in a radio broadcast concluding a five-day visit during which he devoted practically all his time to a study of the possibilities of industrial development in Algeria.

Members of his staff explained that the Premier had decided to launch spectacular activities on the economic level here because he had come to the conclusion that the road to progress is blocked on the political plane.

A political stalemate has been created, according to these sources, by three events: the negative answer of Algerian nationalists to De Gaulle's cease-fire offer; refusal of representative Moslems with nationalist tendencies to be candidates in elections here, and the election victory last Sunday of ultra-conservative elements.

Swiss Liner Seized At Bermuda Stop

183 Passengers Removed;
Ship Held by Debtor Writs

ST. GEORGE, Bermuda (AP)—The liner Arosa Star was seized by police here Sunday and 183 bewildered cruise passengers taken off.

Writ. attaching the 7,114-ton liner and her cargo for more than a million dollars in debts were posted on the foremast within minutes after the vessel docked here.

The Swiss-owned ship, flying the Panama flag, turned into Bermuda instead of going direct to New York—apparently in a move to escape creditors awaiting her return from a 15-day Caribbean cruise.

The passengers were told they would be flown the rest of the way home in chartered planes as soon as possible.

The diversion of the Arosa Star, due in New York Sunday, surprised most of the holiday-makers. One girl exclaimed on arriving in Bermuda: "What's happening? We were having such a good time."

The liner sailed from New York Nov. 21 for a cruise to Caribbean ports, with a financial cloud hanging overhead. She was allowed to set out only after posting a $40,000 bond.

CREDITORS LISTED
Writs served by the police here listed among big creditors Esso Standard Oil of Switzerland, $918,000 for fuel and other supplies, and Caltex of Switzerland, $364,064.

In addition to the 183 passengers, arrangements are being made to fly to New York 23 others who signed to work on the cruise, including orchestra leader Sam Forman of Brooklyn.

"I had three engagements which I won't be able to keep," complained Forman. "This is costing me money."

Mrs. Anita Schneid of Westport, Conn., a passenger, said she broke her arm just before going on the cruise and was anxious to see her doctor Monday.

BOOKINGS HEAVY
Some of the passengers were alarmed at the prospect of being stranded and running short of money. But agents for Wall Street Tours, which chartered the ship for the cruise, assured them they would be flown to New York as soon as possible.

This assurance led many, who had no pressing business appointments, to settle down for a few more days vacation. They were told that while in Bermuda they could use the docked Arosa Star as a hotel.

Atlanta Police Are Alerted for Missing Youth
It won't seem like Christmas to his folks unless Mack gets back home to Birmingham.

Mack Meadows, 16, has been missing from his home in Birmingham since leaving for school on Nov. 12, according to his mother, Mrs. Carl F. Meadows. He was heard asking friends how far it is to Atlanta.

Atlanta police have been notified and furnished a description of the lad. He is five feet, nine inches tall, weighs 125 pounds and has light brown hair and brown eyes. He was wearing a windbreaker when he left home.

Chesnut, Brogdon, Fry Win at Chamblee

Incumbents J. H. Chesnut and J. G. Brogdon and newcomer W. S. Fry were elected to two-year terms on the Chamblee City Council Saturday.

Chesnut, a member of the council since 1951, polled 266 votes for the day's biggest margin. Brogdon, seeking his third term on the council, received 223 votes.

Fry received 223 votes for the second highest total of the election. It was his first race for political office.

Carl R. Ingemanson polled 196 votes and Byron A. Sarris received 114 votes. Some 350 votes were cast in the Chamblee election.

Dunn Trial Is Opening At Baxley

By JACK NELSON
Constitution Staff Writer

BAXLEY—Mayor J. M. (Buck) Dunn goes on trial here Monday on forgery charges involving a city check.

Over the weekend a new indictment, charging theft of an official city record, was brought against Dunn.

The Monday trial is on an earlier charge that Dunn forged and passed a $150 check made payable to James E. Warren. Date of the check was May 15, 1956. At that time, Warren was warden of the Wayne Prison Branch at Jesup.

RECORD MISSING

The indictment returned over the weekend charges Dunn with stealing the original file of the minutes of the April 10, 1956, city council meeting. The grand jury investigated the missing record after a city councilman reported that someone had taken out a page in the minutes book and replaced it with a page that contained a false entry concerning the council meeting.

The indictment charges Dunn stole the page on Nov. 28, 1958. Witnesses are listed as Elmo Thomas, night watchman at the city hall; Mrs. Lois Sharpe, city clerk; W. H. Branch, chief of police, and Henry Claxton, policeman.

MEAL PAYMENTS

Councilmen quoted Mrs. Sharpe as saying the substituted page carried a notation that the council had approved a motion to "reimburse" Mayor Dunn $150 for convicts' meals.

Attached to the indictment in the clerk of court's office is another copy of minutes of the council meeting as prepared by Mrs. Sharpe from original notes. This copy contains no mention of paying Dunn for convicts' meals.

Councilmen said the substituted page in the minutes book is of onion skin and is unsigned. The original was of bond paper and carried the city clerk's signature, they said.

The forgery trial grew out of the Appling County Grand Jury's investigation into the Baxley roads scandal reported last March by The Atlanta Constitution.

The Constitution also discovered the $150 canceled check, which carries a "James E. Warren" endorsement and the notation, "For Deposit, J. M. Dunn." Written on the face of the check is "Prison Labor." Warren has flatly denied ever seeing the check.

Dunn also is charged with conspiring to cheat and defraud the state out of $3,199. The indictment charges Dunn was paid by the state for furnishing street surfacing materials that actually were furnished by the State Highway Department.

Atlanta Housewife Critically Burned

An Atlanta woman was critically burned Sunday afternoon when her clothing caught on fire.

Mrs. Lenora McElroy, 61, of 835 Marcus St., SE, was in critical condition at Grady Hospital. She suffered second- and third-degree burns over most of her body, a hospital spokesman said.

Police were told Mrs. McElroy was standing near an open gas heater and her clothing ignited.

Mrs. McElroy lives with her elderly father.

Neighbors heard her screams and came to her aid.

J. W. (Jim) Gaddy

James Wiley (Jim) Gaddy, 77, died Sunday morning at his home, 306 Sycamore Dr., Decatur.

Born near Fairburn, Mr. Gaddy had lived in Atlanta most of his life. He was retired in 1951 as foreman of the sheet metal department of the Ford Motor Co. assembly plant in Hapeville, after 33 years' service.

He was a member of the East Lake Methodist Church.

Funeral services will be at 3 p. m. Monday in Trinity Chapel. The Rev. George Moore will officiate. Burial will be in Resthaven Cemetery.

Surviving are his wife, the former Nell Whitaker; two sons, W. T. Gaddy, California, and Thomas Reid Gaddy, Texas; two daughters, Mrs. Frances G. Arnold and Mrs. Ophelia Forrester; a sister, Mrs. H. B. Andrews, and a brother, M. L. Gaddy, all of Atlanta.

Mrs. Eunice Reeder

Mrs. Eunice Looney Reeder of 69 Maddox Dr., NE, died Sunday morning in a private hospital.

HEALTH and HAPPINESS

By DR. SARA JORDAN

Victim of Ulcer Likely Superior

In May 1947 Dr. Charles Mayo of the Mayo Clinic said at a meeting in Pittsburgh, "If you want to hire a man who is going to produce, the easiest way to make sure of that is to get one who has a duodenal ulcer." As a corollary to that statement I would add the remark of a relative of mine, who said, "Obviously, the best man to hire for an important job is one who has had an ulcer at 21 and takes good care of it for the rest of his life."

That paragraph I have just written is not just to cheer up the patient who has a look of pain on his face and is in the act of swallowing some milk to relieve it. It is simply to make him feel that because he has an ulcer, he need not think that his job is at stake or that he must renounce all ambitious plans because he has to take care of his ulcer.

As has been said already in this column, the ulcer patient must first find out definitely that he has an ulcer and no trouble must be spared to make absolutely sure of the diagnosis. Then if there is no doubt that the ulcer is there, he must let nothing stand in the way of a complete healing, and when treatment is adequately done it is usually successful.

Now when we say a successful healing, we mean that the ulcer is healed, yes, but there is no guarantee that the healing will be permanent unless its owner takes on the protective role that is necessary to prevent this characteristically recurrent disease from recurring.

To belong to the rather superior group of human beings which Dr. Mayo described as "the producers" is a comfort, perhaps even a compensation for the annoyances and restrictions endured by the ulcer patient. Many of us have noticed that these people with ulcer often are superior in ambition and conscientiousness. This is not to say that the care-free individual is excluded from this roster; nor is it true that all conscientious ambitious people are in it.

It is the observance of certain rules of health protection that makes the onetime ulcer victim more valuable to his employer and to society in general and that gives truth to those statements at the beginning of this article. So cheerio, my ulcer friends, don't worry about being in that upper echelon!

THEY'LL DO IT EVERY TIME

By Hatlo

SO HE THOUGHT WHAT THE BUSINESS WORLD NEEDED WAS ANOTHER BILL COLLECTOR—NOW LISTEN TO THE SAME PROSPECTS—

THANKS AND A TIP OF THE HAT TO LARRY WILLIAMS, 883 DELAWARE RD., KENMORE 17, N.Y.

The happiest season of all the year for all of us is here—and that includes pickpockets. Lt. George Christian of Atlanta's police department warns that the Christmas shopping crowds are fertile ground for the "dips." He gave a few tips which may save you money.

Madam, that bag of yours which has a strap and snaps open at the top is a "help yourself" invitation to the professional pickpocket. In a crowd, he, or she, will slide up as you carry the bag by the strap, and unsnap the top. If you don't notice that movement, then the dip's hand goes in and out comes your billfold.

Carry your bag with your arm through the strap and the bag itself tucked snugly under your arm.

And don't put your purse down on the counter while you look at merchandise. Many a woman has got interested in looking at something for sale and moved away a little bit from where she left her purse. When she came back, no purse, no money.

"Don't take any more money than you need to town," is another piece of advice from Lt. Christian.

And you, sir, start carrying your billfold in your front pocket. If you are going where there are jostling crowds, as in stores and at car stops. Any time you are jostled, put your hand on your billfold. The pickpocket will be looking for it in a hip pocket, and the front pocket placement will throw him off stride for a moment.

Pickpockets sometimes cut a man's pocket with a razor blade to get at his billfold—so you might lose your money and have a pair of trousers ruined at the same time.

Sneak thieves are working the shopping center parking lots, too. Keep your car locked if you are going to pile up parcels in the back seat. The thief will watch you go to the car, put in a package and leave. He knows when you go into the next store that he has plenty of time to open your car and get the packages with little chance of being caught.

Take these precautions and make it a miserable instead of a merry Christmas for pickpockets.

And Great Was the Embarrassment

Years ago there was a rash of pick pocketing (pocket picking?) in Atlanta. A tough Constitution managing editor sent a young reporter to watch crowds at a busy streetcar stop, hoping to catch a pickpocket in the act.

The young reporter stood against a building for hours, smoking cigarettes, being bored, and not seeing anything looking like a pickpocket. He stepped across the street to renew his supply of smokes, reached for his billfold to pay for them, and found that he had had HIS pocket picked. The managing editor made him write it up in a story, too.

YOUR STARS TODAY

We never enjoy perfect happiness; our most fortunate successes are mingled with sadness; some anxieties, always perplex the reality of our satisfaction.

—Cornelle.

Daily Guide—Although the general aspects today are favorable for surface activities such as promoting ideas, selling, making changes, the over-all atmosphere this month is one of high tension and anxiety.

The end of a cycle this month, together with changes in movement of several planets is bound to make this a period of mixed, conflicting events, marked by confused thinking and action by those in high places.

Travel can be hazardous, so keep your wits about you; don't take any kind of foolish chances. To those born around this date, Aug. 9, or April 6, some pleasant surprises may be stimulating today and through Wednesday.

Sagittarians make important contacts tomorrow, and it is excellent in general for all to communicate ideas.

Happy Birthday, Sagittarius! Right now you may wonder what is going to happen next as there is an unusual concentration of planetary influence in your sign this month.

Some long cycle is coming to an end. Decisions have to be made, for another two weeks action could be held up.

There is need to be unusually disciplined and practical, and to be able to face up to reality.

Excellent opportunities are promised for next year and a lifting of restrictions and frustrations. Be patient.

TAIPEI, Formosa (UPI) — Youths in Communist China are now officially allowed to buy their way out of the China mainland for about $200, a Nationalist Central News Agency report from Hong Kong said Sunday. Communist authorities originally prohibited any youth older than 16 from leaving the country because his labor was needed.

Wild Kidnaping Told By Annalist for Frat

By FRANK WELLS

Fred Judd, historian, has two or three whole chapters of history he can write about a midnight kidnaping, the transportation of four unwilling "women" over a state line, and that the FBI showed not the slightest interest.

Fred is the historian of the Sigma Phi Epsilon chapter at Georgia Tech, and, along with Joe Wallace, was the victim of the kidnaping and also unwillingly played the role of a woman as he was carried across the Tennessee-Georgia border.

The whole thing was a coup by pledges at Georgia Tech and University of Tennessee chapters of Sigma Phi Epsilon. The Tech pledges, Rodney Murray, Dave Lamphere, Bob Lantz and Dave Gunter, kidnaped the two upper classmen early Sunday morning after a Saturday night dance at the fraternity house.

They made the frat members dress in girls' clothes and started to Ocoee, Tenn., just across the state line, where they had planned a rendezvous with their Tennessee counterparts. Trouble brewed—not from the kidnaping, but from balky transportation. They had tire trouble, then their car burned out a connecting rod before they got to Ocoee.

Two of the pledges caught a bus and rode to Ocoee, leaving the "girls" and the other two pledges with the stranded car.

The bus arrived at Ocoee at 8 a.m. Sunday, just as the Tennessee "kidnapers" were getting ready to leave to return to their campus.

The Tennessee pledges returned with the Tech pledges to their stranded car, and swapped prisoners. Then the Tech men started back to Atlanta.

They started back via the only means of transportation left to them—hitch-hiking with two "women" and their pledge paddies. The two prisoners had their left wrists handcuffed together, which made it rather awkward as one had always to walk backward.

The strange crew made it as far as Marietta with little trouble. There one of the handcuffs was found to be too tight and was cutting off circulation in one of the "women's" hands. The key to the pledges had wouldn't work, so they stopped a startled cop and got him to loosen the handcuff.

The delegation arrived in Atlanta about 1 p.m. and reported in to the fraternity house, weary, but with a sense of mission accomplished.

'Messiah' at Morris Brown Attracts Eastern Singers

By CLAUDE GEORGE SR.

Ruth Ellison, mezzo-soprano of Boston, and James Hall, bass baritone of New York, will appear with the Morris Brown College concert choir in a rendition of Handel's "The Messiah," at 8 p.m. Dec. 14-15 in the Big Bethel AME Church.

Highlights of the mezzo-soprano's career include her appearance as soloist with the Longines Symphonettes and winning first place honors in the Chicago-Land Music Festival.

Also appearing with the chorus will be two of Morris Brown's most promising young singers, tenor Henry Porter and soprano Marie Mitchell.

The performance will be conducted by G. Johnson Hubert. C. S. Davis will accompany at the organ.

Carol Concert

The choirs of Atlanta University, Spelman and Morehouse will combine to present the 32nd annual Christmas carol concert in Sisters Chapel on the Spelman campus at 8 p.m. Dec. 12-14.

Director for the occasion will be Dr. Willis Laurence James. Accompanists will be Joyce Finch, Dr. Grace B. Boggs and Wendell Whalum.

The president of the United States is the only person who can give Americans an effective lead in weighing foreign policy, a noted historian said here Friday night.

Dr. Walter Johnson, chairman of the department of history at the University of Chicago and author of several history books, told an audience at Atlanta University that one of the most delicate questions in American politics is: can a rational foreign policy be pursued while at the same time the public is kept informed?

The answer he gave was "yes." In supporting his stand, Dr. Johnson discussed the roles played in creating public support by Presidents Franklin Roosevelt, Truman and Eisenhower.

Roosevelt, he said, succeeded in overcoming isolationist sentiment in the nation in the '30s by moving cautiously and slowly.

Dr. Johnson said Truman failed to win support for his policy in Asia, but was extremely successful in regard to his policy in Europe.

He dismissed Eisenhower as a "constitutional monarch" who took little interest in his foreign policy.

Ministers' Union

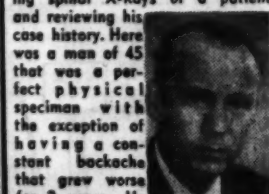

The Atlanta Ministers' Union at its regular meeting at the Wheat Street Baptist Church heard Dr. Charles Sachell Morris of Los Angeles criticize ministers for "bootlegging the Gospel of Jesus Christ."

Chicagoan To Speak

Dr. Abram L. Harris, professor of economics at the University of Chicago, will be the second guest speaker on the fall lecture series sponsored by the Morehouse College sociology department.

BACKACHE? CORRECT THE CAUSE.

Elbert Hubbard said: "The obvious is the last thing we think, so do it." This statement really "rang a bell" the other day while studying spinal X-Rays of a patient and reviewing his case history. Here was a man of 45 that was a perfect physical specimen with the exception of having a constant backache that grew worse for 2 years. He had been told he suffered from everything from Arthritis to Rheumatism and had finally been placed in a back brace and told he would wear this contraption the rest of his life. Our examination revealed pinched nerves caused by misaligned vertebrae in his spine. These vertebrae were replaced to their normal position—the pinched nerves released—the pain ceased—no more back brace. Then we got the inevitable, "Why didn't someone tell me?" This story is an old one to us but may be new to you. Chiropractic could be your answer.
